Foreword

Standard Terminology For Curriculum and Instruction in Local and State School Systems presents a basis for describing curriculum and instruction in elementary, secondary, junior college, and adult education in the United States. The terminology, definitions, and classifications of items in this handbook—representing, in effect, a language of communication—are the result of 5 years of cooperative effort by some 70 national organizations and the Office of Education. During this time, handbook development activities involved hundreds of educators and non-educators representing all geographical areas of the United States and great diversity in responsibility, experience, and preparation.

Undertaken at the request of a number of national organizations, this handbook is the sixth in the State Educational Records and Reports Series. Handbook I, "The Common Core of State Educational Information," was published by the Office of Education in 1953. Handbook II, "Financial Accounting for Local and State School Systems," and Handbook III, "Property Accounting for Local and State School Systems" were completed in 1957 and 1959, respectively. A handbook about employed personnel, Handbook IV, "Staff Accounting for Local and State School Systems," published in 1965, was developed concurrently with Handbook V, "Pupil Accounting for Local and State School Systems," published in 1964.

Preliminary work on Handbook VI—the handbook of terminology about curriculum and instruction—was initiated in 1959. After 6 months of research activity, OE personnel on this project were transferred temporarily to another project. Later, another year of research activity preceded the Policy Meeting, the first official conference of the handbook project.

Convening at the invitation of the U.S. Commissioner of Education in April 1964, a policy committee—comprising the executive secretaries of 13 cooperating organizations—identified the project's prime purpose as the development of a manual of items of information about curriculum and instruction which are needed for the operation of local schools and which will provide guidance for wording information requests from State education agencies and the Office of Education. Agreement was reached on the overall plan for conducting the project and the role each organization was to assume.

This handbook was developed through a series of conferences in accordance with the plan agreed upon by the policy committee. Representatives to the three national conferences and nine regional meetings were selected by the 13 cooperating organizations through their executive secretaries. Decisions reached at all meetings were those of the representatives of the associations. The function of Office of Education personnel was to do the initial research, coordinate the content of this handbook with other handbooks of the series, edit handbook drafts, prepare for and conduct meetings, and provide the best information possible for the use of conference participants in reaching sound decisions. At each step in the project the Office of Education handbook personnel consulted with appropriate specialists—within and outside the Office of Education—for their reactions and suggestions.

The overall project plan was set into motion on May 20 and 21, 1964, at the National Planning Conference of representatives of the 13 original organizations plus the Research Division of the National Education Association. These representatives determined the general scope and content of the handbook of terminology about curriculum and instruction.

Office of Education staff members developed the first preliminary draft of the handbook following the guidelines established at the planning conference and utilizing the results of their own study of forms and manuals used in the 50 States and in more than 200 local school systems.

The first draft was subjected to critical examination at a Technical Conference in March 1965, as six persons representing various cooperating organizations met with the Office of Education staff for 5 days. As a result of this meeting, the handbook was structured to reflect the organization, administration, content, resources, and processes of instruction.

Eighteen ad hoc committees met between June 1965 and June 1966 to analyze and refine substantive content that would be descriptive of the various subject-matter areas as appropriate to elementary, secondary, junior college, and adult education. These committees involved 216 specialists representing local school systems, State departments of education, colleges and universities, business and industry, labor, the Office of Education, and others.

The work of the Technical Conference and the ad hoc committees was incorporated into the second draft of the handbook, which was reviewed in August 1966 at the National Review Conference. This 4-day, item-by-item review by representatives of the 13 cooperating organizations and the NEA Research Division readied the document for use at a series of nine regional meetings.

Three-day Regional Conference were held during June and July 1967 at Boston, Mass.; Washington, D.C.; Atlanta, Ga.; Columbus, Ohio; Des Moines, Iowa; Dallas, Tex.; Salt Lake City, Utah, Billings, Mont.; and San Francisco, Calif. These meetings brought together 141 representatives of the 13 original organizations, who studied the handbook draft intensively and made recommendations to improve it for meeting the wide variations in needs and practices across the country. On most items there was general agreement. The comparatively few issues on which differences of opinion existed were submitted, as appropriate, to the ad hoc committees, professional organizations, and qualified specialists for recommendations before becoming topics for consideration at the National Completion Conference.

The National Completion Conference was held March 10-12, 1969. A majority of its participants, selected by the executive secretaries of the 13 organizations involved in all phases of the project, had taken part also in the earlier National Review Conference. At this concluding 3-day meeting, issues were resolved and final decisions were made on the organization and content of the handbook.

The final draft was completed and duplicated in the spring of 1969, and copies were distributed to all 76 participating organizations. Subsequently, each of the 13 cooperating organizations providing continual guidance and assistance from the inception of the project to its completion officially approved the handbook as the basic guide for items of information about curriculum and instruction to be used in the local and State school systems of the United States. Further, they recommended that Federal, State, and local agencies effect its use as promptly as feasible.

It is anticipated that, at some future date, it will be necessary to reappraise all items and definitions in this handbook in light of the experience gained through implementation and usage. Through such action, the value of this handbook may be maintained.

Introduction

This handbook is a guide for local and State school systems for items of information used in keeping records and making reports about curriculum and instruction. It classifies and defines specific items of information about the organization, administration, content, resources, and processes of curriculum development and instruction and includes additional related terminology. In so doing, the handbook is concerned with terminology for describing curriculum and instruction in elementary schools, middle schools, secondary schools, junior colleges,¹ and adult schools or other adult education organizational arrangements.²

Three basic criteria—need, communication, and reasonableness—were used as guides in the selection of each item for inclusion in this handbook. According to these criteria, each item provides information that (1) may be important to and needed by local school systems for the effective operation of their schools; (2) may be needed for the exchange, reporting, or storage of information about pupils and their studies, staff members and their assignments, and schools and school systems and their approval and accreditation, or for comparisons of information about curriculum and instruction; and (3) can be collected and maintained as a record with reasonable effort.

The use of this handbook may provide school officials with guidance in identifying items of information from which to obtain factual and comparative data for developing their own policies and decisions and for more effectively communicating with their publics, their legislative bodies, and educational organizations. The use of these items permits comparability wherever these items are collected, maintained, and reported by local school districts and other units operating schools. In order to achieve such comparability, collecting of information should be done on the basis of the definitions included in the handbook, and reporting should be done on the basis of the handbook terminology. Thus, these items may provide the foundation for records and reports about curriculum and instruction at the local, State, and national levels, and provide a means for accurately recording, transmitting, and interpreting information about curriculum and instruction.

Handbook Series

This handbook is one of a series of handbooks developed cooperatively to facilitate and improve the collection, maintenance, and reporting of educational information. Handbook I, The Common Core of State Educational Information, was published in 1953. It was followed by Handbook II, Financial Accounting for Local and State School Systems, in 1957; Handbook III, Property Accounting for Local and State School Systems, in 1959; Handbook IV, Staff Accounting for Local and State School Systems, in 1965; and Handbook V, Pupil Accounting for Local and State School Systems, which was completed in 1964.

The items of information in the various handbooks are interrelated. Many of the definitions of items in this handbook are the same as those developed for others in the series; other definitions have been modified or expanded, as has been indicated for those items included in the glossary. In several portions of this handbook reference is made to items of information in the other handbooks.

Benefits of Standardized Information About Curriculum and Instruction

The consistent use of the terminology in this handbook can help improve the quality of education by facilitating meaningful evaluation, realistic planning, and efficient operation of educational systems throughout the United States. It can result in improved decisionmaking capabilities in areas such as administration, guidance of individual pupils, curriculum improvement, and instruction.

The standardized terminology in this handbook provides a basis by which items of information about curriculum and instruction can be recorded, reported, and studied adequately. When such information is used, records and reports may be prepared with greater speed, accuracy, and flexibility.

Wide use of the items of information in this handbook, accurately recorded at their source, will result in the advantages of—

- a sound basis for describing and evaluating administrative, organizational, and teaching practices;
- a greater quantity of significant information to guide local, State, and national authorities in determining educational needs and policies;

- easier and more reliable reporting to the public on the condition and progress of education;
- ease in utilizing local administrative information in reports to State agencies (facilitated by the use of electronic data processing equipment);
- greater consistency in the kinds of information accompanying pupils who transfer from one school or school system to another or from a

- secondary school to a college or other institution;
- greater comparability of information about instructional programs within the various communities and States;
- greater accuracy in the summaries of information compiled by local, State, and national offices; and
- more favorable conditions for research and use of research data.

In addition, reports based on these standardized items of information will not only reinforce the confidence of their users but also will be more generally applicable and more easily interpreted than reports based on various nonstandard items.

Within a local or State school system, standardized items of information recorded or processed manually may be readily compared and combined with the same standardized items of information processed by automatic data processing systems. Further, the use of standardized items of information is essential to the orderly and efficient conversion from manual to automatic data processing. In such a conversion, the adoption of standard classifications and terminology is a necessary first step, whether a school system plans to initiate or to extend automatic data processing for an individual school or for the entire school system.

Basic Definitions

The term instructional program is defined as the totality of the curriculum and its implementation through direct instruction and other means.

The curriculum is considered to encompass the instructional activities planned and provided for pupils by the school or school system. The curriculum, therefore, is the planned interaction of pupils with instructional content, instructional resources, and instructional processes for the attainment of educational objectives.

- educational objectives are derived from identified needs;
- an organizational arrangement is developed or utilized for achieving these objectives; and
- pupils are brought into the environment of this organizational arrangement (usually a school) where they interact with the content, resources, and processes of instruction.

Instruction includes the activities dealing directly with the teaching of pupils and with improving the quality of teaching. Teaching, the major aspect of instruction, may be provided for pupils in a classroom of a school or in another location such as in a home or hospital; it may be provided by direct pupil-teacher interaction or through some other approved medium such as television, radio, telephone, and correspondence.

Learning is of greatest importance. The purpose of instruction is to enhance learning. The items of information in this handbook, however, were selected to describe that which is provided for pupils in the instructional process rather than that which is acquired by pupils as learning.

In summarizing the meaning of the two terms curriculum and instruction, one might consider that the curriculum is what is taught, and instruction is how it is taught.

A pupil is defined as an individual for whom instruction is provided in an educational program under the jurisdiction of a school or school system. No distinction is made between the terms pupil and student; the term pupil is used here to include all individuals receiving instruction.

Other definitions may be located through use of the index.

Content of This Handbook

This handbook provides three principal kinds of information about the standard terminology of curriculum and instruction at various levels in local and State school systems: Items of information about the organization, administration, content, resources, and processes of instruction; the subject matter of the curriculum; and related terminology and other considerations.

Items of information about the organization, administration, content, resources, and processes of instruction are classified in detail in chapter 3 under the following major classes or levels of organization in a graduated numbering system:

ITEMS DESCRIBING A SCHOOL SYSTEM ³	(1 00 00 Series)
ITEMS DESCRIBING A SCHOOL ⁴	(2 00 00 Series)
ITEMS DESCRIBING A PROGRAM OF STUDIES ⁵	(3 00 00 Series)
ITEMS DESCRIBING A SELF-CONTAINED CLASS, COURSE, OR CO-CURRICULAR ACTIVITY ⁶	(4 00 00 Series)
ITEMS DESCRIBING A SECTION OR INSTRUCTIONAL SERVICE ACTIVITY ⁷	(5 00 00 Series)

The items of information are organized within these major classes as illustrated in table 1. (Similar information is shown in table 6, citing page references.)

The definitions shown in chapter 4 are organized according to the categories of information—shown in the left column of table 1—in graduated series or levels of educational organization as shown to the right. The categories are then expanded according

It may be noted that the 22 curriculum areas include 20 specific subject-matter areas, one curriculum area devoted to general elementary and general secondary education, and one area to cocurricular activities. Of the 20 specific subject-matter areas, seven are frequently identified as occupational areas: agriculture, distributive education, health occupations education, home economics, office occupations, technical education, and trade and industrial occupations.⁸

Thus, this handbook serves primarily to identify and define items of information which can be used to describe aspects of curriculum and instruction. As an aid to using these items, chapter 2 "Information About Curriculum and Instruction" illustrates how these items may be used in developing records and reports. An alphabetical glossary of terms, including measures relating to curriculum and instruction, begins on page 257. The handbook is concluded with an index.

Because it is not devoted to recordkeeping and reporting systems, this handbook touches only briefly on procedures for collecting, processing, and using information about curriculum and instruction. Comprehensive materials illustrative of machine or computer programming, data flow charts, collection forms, and card and tape layouts for data processing will be useful to or needed by local school systems and State education agencies when they begin to put this handbook into use.

Adapting This Handbook to Local Records and Reports Systems

The items of information presented and defined in this handbook have been identified as broad and comprehensive enough to describe present practice in planning, operating, and improving curriculum and instruction in most schools and school systems throughout the country. However, the needs for educational information vary from State to State and from school system to school system. This handbook provides for such variation in informational needs through its use of recommended and optional items and through its structure which provides for expansion within categories of information according to local and State requirements.

Provision is made in chapters 3 and 4 for the varying information needs of schools and school systems in the following manner:

Recommended items. It is recommended that a number of items of information about curriculum and instruction should be collected and maintained in comparable form for given types of instructional programs in all the school systems where they are applicable.

Optional items. A number of additional items are identified which may be collected and maintained for given types of instructional programs at the option of a school or school system. If collected and maintained, these items should incorporate handbook terms and definitions so that this additional information can be correctly interpreted and so that statistical information about any given school or system will be comparable with similar information about other schools and school systems.

The recommendations of this handbook are not intended to restrict the amount of information maintained. Schools and school systems should maintain whatever additional information they find necessary, maintaining a compatibility with the classifications and definitions of the handbook.

Finally, no item of information in this handbook is intended to take precedence in those situations where items of information of its type are either required or prohibited by law.

Thus, this handbook has been developed as a guide to types of factual and comparative data which school officials at all levels may use in developing their own policies and decisions and in communicating with their publics, their legislative bodies, and educational organizations.

Collecting and Using Information About Curriculum and Instruction

The teaching-learning process is the heart of education. It is for purposes of learning that schools are built, staff members employed, and pupils brought into the classroom. All who guide aspects of the educational enterprise require information about curriculum, instruction, and learning for many purposes including evaluation and decision-making.

The terms and definitions of this handbook have been selected primarily according to needs of local school personnel such as superintendents, directors of curriculum, principals, teachers, guidance counselors, and school board members (see criteria on page 1). Many such items collected for local purposes are forwarded to supply the information requirements of the State department of education and others. Ultimately, those requesting information from local school systems are likely to find handbook items to be more readily available for reporting in useable form than similar items not included in the handbook, and handbook items collected from various sources will be more comparable or combinable.

This chapter includes some guidelines and procedures for obtaining and using information chiefly about curriculum and instruction. In brief, the basic steps for strengthening a system or records and reports usually include—

- identifying needs for information;
- establishing responsibility for planning and for obtaining information at the various administrative levels;
- selecting the required items of information, and classifying and describing them;
- planning for the collection and communication of information, including the development of any forms necessary for rapid recording, combining, communicating, interpreting, and utilizing of the data;
- planning for coordination among areas of educational information; and
- implementing the new information system.

The Need for Information About Curriculum and Instruction

The starting point for the development or improvement of an information system is the determination of need. Needs for information about curriculum and instruction should help identify the objectives of the information system; these objectives, in turn, should lead to identification of the items of information required and their priorities.

Among persons and organizations needing information about curriculum and instruction are those having responsibility for operating schools, those providing services for schools and educators, governmental agencies, and segments of the general public, as is illustrated in table 3. They need information for purposes of evaluation, curriculum improvement, scheduling, assisting pupils, reporting, long-range planning, and other administrative functions, as is illustrated in table 4 for local schools and in table 5 for State education agencies.

The availability and use of appropriate and accurate information about curriculum and instruction can greatly enhance the effectiveness of educational decisionmaking locally, statewide, nationally, and regionally.

Responsibility for Information About Curriculum and Instruction

Because information about curriculum and instruction is essential for planning and decision-making at all levels of educational administration, the responsibility for obtaining, combining, using, and forwarding appropriate educational information is shared by individual schools, the local school system, the State education agency, and the Office of Education.

This handbook primarily concerns information about curriculum and instruction. However, general principles stated here and elsewhere in this chapter may be applied broadly to an entire information system and to limited areas of information within the system as well.

Function and Responsibility of Individual School

Instruction generally takes place within a school. Therefore, most information about curriculum and instruction—for example, information about specific programs of studies, self-contained classes, and courses—originates within schools. This information must be collected accurately in the school, for no amount of manipulation at a later time will assure the accuracy of information not collected properly at its source. The school, therefore, is the most critical point in the information system.

All school staff members involved in collecting, storing, processing, and transmitting information have a vital responsibility for the accuracy of information. The importance of their activity justifies instruction in techniques which help to ensure accuracy.

Function and Responsibility of Local School System

Personnel at the local school system level of organization generally assume leadership roles in coordinating the efforts of the staffs of the central office and the individual schools in planning and implementing educational information systems. Such coordination facilitates obtaining information for which there is an administrative need or a responsibility.

To design and implement an effective and efficient information system, a school system will find it helpful to carry out the types of activities listed under the last heading on this page. Additionally, many of the activities described below for State education agencies are carried on also within larger school systems. If the information system is to reach full effectiveness in performing such operations, the school system and the schools must have adequate staffing, facilities, and financial support.

Function and Responsibility of State Education Agency

The strategic position of State education agencies puts upon each agency the responsibility for coordinating State and local statistical programs and providing the leadership and technical assistance necessary for planning and implementing a statewide information system.

Planning requires a careful analysis of the existing information system. Current regulations, manuals, procedures, and forms may need to be revised and new materials prepared for local, regional, and statewide consideration. It may be appropriate to initiate the development of a State handbook for information about curriculum and instruction, based on the national handbook.

In their planning, many State agencies arrange to space requests for information from local school systems in order to avoid, so far as possible, excessive demands at any given time. When all the local school systems of a State can and do provide the State agency with comparable information about instructional programs, the State agency can provide the local systems with compiled and interpreted information about instructional programs throughout the State.

The State education agency may help guide and train local school system personnel by means of conferences, written materials, and direct assistance. Conferences may be used to familiarize local personnel with the need for, and details of, the national or State handbook of terminology, to discuss ways and means by which this handbook might most profitably be put into practice in each school system, and to consider revised or new materials based on the handbook. Articles by both local and State personnel dealing with various phases of implementation activities in local school systems may be circulated. Consultative services may be provided for those school systems needing help with specific problems. Pilot projects might be initiated in selected school systems prior to general implementation of the information system throughout the State.

Finally, the State education agency may find it beneficial to enlist the support and cooperation of various local, State, and national professional organizations and of other State governmental agencies that have jurisdiction over segments of the State educational program.

Function and Responsibility of the Office of Education

The ability to evaluate the impact of the total educational system on national resources is essential for guiding national policy. One of the functions of the United States Office of Education is to act as the channel of communications between the Federal Government and the school structure acquainting Federal agencies with the status, capabilities, and needs of the schools, and conversely, interpreting Federal or national needs to the schools.

Since the administration of the schools of the Nation is decentralized the Office of Education is in a strategic position to provide a channel for coordination of educational activities for which the several States have common concern and responsibility. This handbook is one example of how the Office of Education functions in this capacity.

Numerous other activities of the Office of Education are conducted in response to its legal responsibility for reporting on the status and progress of education in the United States. Many of these activities involve relationships with educational agencies within the States, and are similar to those activities mentioned above for State agencies working with their local school systems.

Principles and Procedures for Planning and Implementing a System of Information About Curriculum and Instruction

A fundamental step in the improvement of information about curriculum and instruction at both State and local levels is placing administrative responsibility in the hands of a single person—a person who understands educational as well as technical aspects of educational information systems and who understands the relationships between instructional program information and information in the areas of pupil accounting, staff accounting, property accounting, and financial accounting. His activity should be coordinated with work in other areas of the total system of educational information. His work will be greatly facilitated by the active support of top administrators for any required changes in the information system, and he will require enough competent staff members to plan, supervise, and operate the system. Under his direction, the staff should:

- Identify all needs of the educational system for information about curriculum and instruction, including the uses to which the information will be put.

- Determine the objectives of the information system in light of these informational needs.
- Plan carefully a step-by-step program for collecting, processing, interpreting, storing, and disseminating data, with consideration for requirements of all the various areas of educational information. The plan should be put into writing.
- Make certain that requests for data are necessary, reasonable, and timely and that the information collected can flow readily from local records to reports needed by the administrative officers at any level of organization.
- Select items that are needed to meet informational needs and that suppliers are capable of furnishing. Wherever possible these data items should be described in standard terms to ensure comparability of information among schools of a school system and school systems of a State, thus permitting ready communication and generation of meaningful statistical totals. Items selected should be codable for automatic or electronic data processing.
- Incorporate the data items into appropriate information collection forms. These forms should be easy to understand, easy to fill in, easy to process. The number of forms should be kept to a minimum by limiting the number of duplicating or overlapping requests and by designing forms so that they can be used for more than one purpose.
- Gain the cooperation of all concerned, and attempt to dispel any unwarranted fears or reservations.
- Provide whatever assistance is required by suppliers of data in carrying out their responsibilities.
- Ensure the accuracy of information at its source by helping staff members understand the purposes and importance of the information, impressing local employees with their responsibility for accurate information, and instructing them in the techniques of accurately collecting and processing information.
- Utilize modern methods for processing information, including appropriate devices and procedures; and protect records against inappropriate use and loss through destructive hazards.
- Make the transfer from the old to the new system in a deliberate and careful manner, utilizing, if appropriate, the old and new systems concurrently until the new system is effectively installed.
- Keep records up to date at all times, after the new system has been installed.
- Strive for promptness in forwarding required information to other agencies, making possible early compilation of their reports and thus increasing the timeliness and usefulness of these reports.
- Encourage all who have a stake in the information system—suppliers, collectors, processors, and users of the information—to evaluate continuously its adequacy and effectiveness and to improve it from time to time.

Development of Records and Reports About Curriculum and Instruction

Instruction is the principal activity of the schools. However, while administrators frequently have a quantity of usable information available about the finances and pupils of their schools, they seldom have a comparable amount of useful information about their instructional programs.

This handbook provides a means for describing selected aspects of curriculum and instruction within each of the several levels of organization for instruction, including the school system, individual school, the program of studies, self-contained class or course, cocurricular activity, section, and service activity. For each of these levels there are items or categories of information which may be used, as appropriate, to describe aspects of organization, administration, instructional content, instructional resources, and instructional processes. Table 6 shows where this information may be located in the handbook.

To illustrate the use of table 6, the ninth category of information is "Pupils served." All handbook items about types of pupils served are defined in chapter 4 beginning on page 80 and have the identification number 09. Chapter 3, with an outline of items appropriate for each level of organization, contains items about pupils served by a school (number 20900) on page 37, by a program of studies (number 30900) on page 44, by a given course (number 40900) on page 50, and by a given section of a course (number 50900) on page 57.

A few detailed items of information have been selected to illustrate in table 7 the manner in which specific self-contained classes and courses may be described for various levels of organization. A description of a different class or course is included in each vertical column. For example, the combination of items in the third column describes a general science course in the eighth grade of a junior high school. If desired, such a description may be extended considerably, using the items of this handbook. Descriptions of items in boldface letters are included in chapters 5 and 6 while descriptions of the other items may be located in chapters 3 and 4; the identification numbers may be used to locate the terminology and definitions or descriptions in these chapters.

Figure 2 provides an illustration of the close relationship that exists between "Items of Information About the Organization, Administration, Content, Resources, and Processes of Instruction" (classified in chapter 3 and defined or described in chapter 4), and "Items of Information About Subject Matter and Cocurricular Activities" (Classified in chapter 5 and defined or described in chapter 6).

Contemporary World Affairs, classified (as item number 15.11 03 00 00) in chapter 5 and described in chapter 6 in the Political Science category of the Social Sciences/Social Studies subject-matter area, may serve as an example for relating items of information from chapters 3 and 4 to an item about subject matter. The narrative description of Contemporary World Affairs, the "Subject Matter" in figure 2, may be enhanced by relating to it selected items from chapters 3 and 4, the peripheral items in figure 2, such as:

- Treatment of content: survey of area (item 42200.05).
- Planned instructional outcome: appreciations and attitudes (item 42300.02).
- Pupils served by course: normal range of pupils (item 30950.10).

- Grade placement: grade 12 (item 20321.12).
- Level of difficulty: average difficulty (item 40410.10).
- Time segment in daily session: single class period (item 40686.13).
- Principal methods of instruction: discussion, lecture and seminar (items 44300.05, 44300.13, and 44300.23).
- Principal medium of instruction: direct pupil-teacher interaction—single teacher (item 44211.10).
- Teaching procedures within class: basis for grouping pupils—interests; arrangement of course content—separate subject (items 44420.30 and 44110.10).

An overview of subject matter available throughout a school system may be indicated in the columns of the pages of chapter 5, as is illustrated in table 8 and described in the introduction to chapter 5 on page 107. This type of chart also may be used to describe instruction, provided by the school system central staff, which would be included under item 11310, Instruction on Systemwide Basis. An extension of this type of chart, as is illustrated in table 9, may be used to describe all the subject matter provided within a single school. Information on such charts for the various schools of a school system may provide the source of information used in completing the systemwide chart illustrated in table 8.

Relating Information About Curriculum and Instruction to Other Areas of Educational Information

For purposes of simplicity or convenience, information about education frequently is organized into broad recordkeeping areas referred to by terms such as financial accounting, property accounting, staff accounting, and pupil accounting. In a total information system, all such areas are interrelated, or will be ultimately. These interrelationships are illustrated in figure 3.

Figure 3. — Some interrelationships among areas of information about education

The top surface of the model in figure 3 indicates large blocks of information about pupils, staff, property, and the instructional program (curriculum and instruction). The block for curriculum and instruction is subdivided in this model into instructional processes, services, content, and administration/organization. The horizontal slices of the model indicate how specific organizational units—such as given school systems, schools, courses, cocurricular activities, and sections—are described in terms of information about the instructional program, property, staff, and pupils. Information about pupils, staff, property, and the instructional program thus is interrelated in describing specific organizational units.

Characteristics of property (that is—land, buildings, equipment, and supplies), staff members, and services may be described in terms of their cost or value, as is suggested by the dollar sign bracketing these areas in figure 3.

Measures Involving Curriculum and Instruction

As referred to in this handbook, a measure related to curriculum and instruction is any quantitative information about a school, school system, or other reporting unit (e.g., a type of self-contained class or course, an intermediate administrative unit, or a State) which concerns curriculum and instruction and frequently is related to one or more items of information about pupils, staff, property, finances, and time. Such measures describe the quantity or extent of given elements affecting an instructional program and are used for making comparisons among similar administrative units. Measures involving curriculum and instruction may be compared when they—

- are based on standardized items of information;
- apply to comparable administrative units (e.g., similar schools, school districts, intermediate administrative units, or States);

- involve comparable time elements; and
- are computed by comparable processes.

Table 10 illustrates the manner in which items and areas of information might be interrelated as "measures" to describe an aspect of the operation of a single school. If desired, similar comparisons may be made for information about a school system, program of studies, self-contained class, course, cocurricular activity, section, or service activity. Though many of the items included in such measures are not defined in this handbook, they sometimes are used in making judgments about the adequacy or appropriateness of aspects of the instructional program.

Among measures involving curriculum and instruction are the following, many of which are described in the glossary. These numerous measures may be scanned in selecting those which might be useful for given purposes in given situations.

Evaluation of Quality

The need arises at times for schools, school systems, accreditation associations, and other agencies to undertake an evaluation of the quality of the instructional program of a given school or school system. There are at least three types of evaluation, including (1) satisfying minimum or basic legal requirements, sometimes referred to as "approval," (2) determining the extent to which set standards of quality surpassing minimum legal requirements are met, sometimes referred to as "accreditation," and (3) determining the extent to which specified local needs and objectives are being met or have been met. In all three types the basis for evaluation or assessment is comprised of predetermined requirements, standards, or objectives to which actual performance is compared.¹

The items presented in chapters 3 and 4 are quantitative in nature. They may be used to indicate whether or not given conditions exist within a school or school system; when totaled (as for pupils of a school or schools of a school system) they are an indication of the extent to which given conditions exist.

To make a judgment of quality, an evaluator must first ascertain whether or not a condition or practice exists and the extent to which it exists (the quantitative element mentioned above), and then apply a subjective value judgment as to the appropriateness, adequacy, and effectiveness of the condition or practice. This may be done by rating each condition or practice as "satisfactory" or "unsatisfactory"; "superior," "average," or "poor" (or "needs improvement"); or on a numerical continuum (for example, "0, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5") in which each rating is combined with other ratings of related conditions, perhaps with weightings for some ratings, for a total score.

The purposes of this handbook are limited to providing the means for identifying or describing selected practices and conditions, singly and in combination; any desired or required value judgments must be provided from some other source.

For purposes of evaluation of quality, the types of quantitative information included above as "measures" frequently are used in conjunction with the following types of information (many of which encompass items of chapter 4) in the statement of requirements, standards, or objectives as well as in the determination of the extent to which any such requirements, standards, or objectives have been satisfied or met:

- Location of school system (including region of the country and size, e.g., rural, village, town, or large city)
- Characteristics of community (including occupational structure of community; educational level of parents; cooperation of schools with community agencies; community attitude toward schools; local problems, e.g., juvenile delinquency, civil rights, and unemployment; and community planning for improvement of housing, recreation, and health needs) (See item X0710.30 and the X3300 Series of chapter 4.)

Use of Information About Curriculum and Instruction in Research and Experimentation

The widespread implementation of the items of information in this handbook will result in the availability of vast quantities of comparable information which might be utilized for research purposes. Information most valuable for all purposes becomes available when comparable information is used within the schools and is forwarded, as required, to other agencies such as local school systems, State education agencies, other State agencies and associations, the United States Office of Education, other Federal agencies, and national associations.

Although in the development of this handbook use of the classification system for research was not a primary concern, it may be noted that when quantities of comparable information are available in computer or other storage facilities, they may be tapped with comparative ease for making meaningful totals and for comparing different variables. The use of agreed-on handbook items in local school systems will aid in eliminating duplication of requests for information from different sources and save time in obtaining the needed information. These common items may serve as guides to researchers, providing some indication as to what items of information might be available and in what form. Use of these items will provide greater opportunity for meaningful research for various types of governmental agencies at all levels, nongovernmental organizations of various scopes of operation, organizations of school systems, foundations operating in the field of education, accrediting associations, and college and university personnel.

As an illustration of the possible use of these comparable items in experimentation, personnel of the local school system might test hypotheses about factors of significance in the learning process by identifying for given pupil groups, educational "input" items which vary (e.g., teacher qualifications, teacher personality, teaching methods, organization of classes, length and frequency of classes, variations in instructional content, and use of various instructional resources) to learn which of these factors have significant effect upon the educational "output" (as indicated by the performance of pupils in school, outside of school, and after leaving the school). Certain of these input items might be identified in this way as being "crucial," or as factors which significantly influence the quality of education. Needless to say, this illustration goes somewhat beyond current practice and well beyond the scope of the specifics or intent of this handbook.

An orientation to this handbook and uses to which its items of information may be put has been included in chapters 1 and 2. The next chapter includes a classification of items of information which may be used to describe aspects of the organization, administration, content, resources, and process of curriculum and instruction. These items are defined in chapter 4. Subject-matter areas are included in chapters 5 and 6.

Classification of Items of Information About Curriculum and Instruction

Items of information describing significant aspects of the organization, administration, content, resources, and processes of curriculum and instruction are classified in this chapter according to levels of organization and selected categories of information. They are identified by a numbering system which reflects these categories and are appropriate for all types of schools and school systems. Definitions of these items are found in chapter 4 on the pages indicated in this chapter under the column heading Definition Page Number. Items used to describe the subject matter of instructional programs are presented in chapters 5 and 6.

An Item of Information About Curriculum and Instruction: Definition

An item of information, as defined for use in this handbook, is a descriptive heading under which is recorded information about curriculum and instruction. This heading may be (a) a broad categorical heading with a structured set of subheadings; (b) a broad categorical heading without a structured set of subheadings, under which a specified type of information is recorded; or (c) a heading of limited scope under which specific information is recorded. These headings, and the entries under them, form the basis for records and reports about curriculum and instruction.

Little attempt is made to distinguish between those categories of information from which a single multiple-choice item should be selected for report purposes and those categories from which two or more items may be chosen; such a distinction should be included, however, on any form used for the collection of these items.

The items of this chapter reflect five levels of organization—(1) the school system as a whole; (2) an individual school; (3) a program of studies; (4) a general self-contained class, course, or cocurricular activity; and (5) a specific section or an instructional service activity. Information about the smaller units of organization may be combined with other similar information to describe, in summary, aspects of larger units, e.g., information about a specific section of "Freshman English" may be combined with information about other similar sections in the school or throughout the school system. Items presented for smaller units of organization may be used to describe activities provided directly by the school system rather than by a school (e.g., a systemwide orchestra, or a special class in science meeting once a week for gifted fifth-graders).

The items are not intended to describe school board policy, but are intended to provide a means to reflect instructional practices at all levels within the local school system. These items may be used to indicate what is being done in the various classrooms and schools and may reflect, in this way, the implementation of policy.

Recommended and Optional Items

Information about instructional programs is essential for individual schools and school systems throughout the United States and its outlying areas. Those items of information which are basic and are therefore recommended as needed for operating most schools and local school systems are identified in this chapter by the designation "Rec."¹ Those items of information which are important and may be collected and maintained at the option of individual schools and school systems are identified by the designation "Op."¹ Additional items may be collected and maintained by individual schools and school systems at their own option as needed for their own purposes. Where a school system has a need to expand its system of information about curriculum and instruction, the expansion should be done in such a way that any additional items of information are readily classifiable under the headings presented in this handbook.

The use of the designations "Rec" and "Op" is not intended to prescribe practice; it is intended to provide guidance to persons and groups establishing or reviewing their systems of information about curriculum and instruction.

Information According to Type of Instructional Program

Designations for the columns on the right-hand side of pages, beginning on page 29, are used to indicate the types of instructional programs to which specific items apply (i.e., elementary school instructional program, secondary school instructional program, instructional program for college credit, and adult education instructional program). The items of information on pages 21 to 29 refer to the entire school system and therefore are not identified with any such type of program.

Identification Numbers

The numbers appearing at the left of the items of information included in this chapter are for identification purposes, for locating items within the classification structure of the chapter.

The items are organized primarily on the basis of level of organization, the first digit of the number representing the level.² The second and third digits represent the major category of information, and provide the basis for the organization of items in chapter 4.³ The digits following represent subdivisions of these categories.

Those numbers without integers to the right of the decimal point serve to identify general categories of information. Many of these categories contain subdivisions which are quite specific.

Those identification numbers with integers to the right of the decimal point serve to identify items of information which are limited in scope and specific. Each item of this type appears with one or more related items under a categorical heading. Such items may be used either in combination or as alternatives, according to the information needs of the school or school system.

The numbering of broad categories and specific items can provide the foundation for a coding system. Those items having identification numbers with digits to the right of the decimal point are multiple-choice items and may be used with appropriate adaptations as a code in the processing, storage, retrieval, and transmission of items of information about curriculum and instruction. Such a code may be used by local and State school systems for both manual and automated methods of data processing.

² 1=school system; 2=school; 3=program of studies; 4=self-contained class, course or cocurricular activity; 5=section, or instructional service activity.

³ These major categories are outlined on p. 4 and p. 10.

ITEMS DESCRIBING A SCHOOL SYSTEM 10000 Series

A school system comprises all the schools and supporting services controlled by a board of education or by any other organization which operates one or more schools. Items of information included in the 10000 Series may be used to describe those aspects of curriculum and instruction of a school system that (a) are centrally administered and are system-wide in scope, (b) involve all schools of the system having a given type of instructional program, or (c) involve a portion of the school system which is larger than one school but less than all schools having a given type of instructional program.

In those instances in which a program of studies, course, or cocurricular activity is organized centrally for qualified pupils of more than one school of the school system, items of information may be drawn as appropriate from the 20000, 30000, 40000, and 50000 Series—or from chapter 6—and included in the 11310 Series.

A school system comprised of a single school is identified under item 10260.50; items of information which can be used to describe practices within such a school are included in the 20000 Series.

ITEMS DESCRIBING A PROGRAM OF STUDIES

30000 Series

A program of studies is a combination of related courses and/or self-contained classes organized for the attainment of specific educational objectives, e.g., a program of special education for handicapped pupils, a college preparatory program, an occupational program (in a given occupation or cluster of occupations), a general education program, and a transfer program.

Items of information included in the 30000 Series may be used to describe aspects of each program of studies offered by a school. This includes items concerning the type of program, accreditation or approval, units of value or "credits," pupils served by the program, requirements for entrance into the program, requirements and recognition for completion, and the content of the program. Items of information used for describing the school providing each program of studies are included in the 20000 Series.

For certain types of schools, items of information descriptive of a "department" (e.g., of an English department or science department) may be drawn as appropriate from various portions of the handbook and included under this heading. Among such items are those used to describe departmental course offerings (see item X5740 of chapter 4), staff members (see the X5000 Series of chapter 4), facilities (the X3500 Series), and equipment and supplies (the X3600 Series).

ITEMS DESCRIBING A SELF-CONTAINED CLASS, COURSE, OR COCURRICULAR ACTIVITY

40000 Series

Items of information included in the 40000 Series may be used to describe aspects of each type of self-contained class, course, or cocurricular activity, e.g., all the fifth-grade classes of a school, all the freshman English classes, and all the class organizations. This includes items for describing content, aspects of administrative arrangements, time elements, approval, type of pupils served, instruction, and recognition for completion.

A self-contained class is a class having the same teacher (or team of teachers) for all or most of the daily school session. A type of self-contained class in a given school may comprise two or more sections, e.g., three sections of the fourth grade.

A course is an organization of subject matter and related learning experiences provided for the instruction of pupils on a regular or systematic basis, usually for a predetermined period of time (e.g., a semester, regular school term, and a 2-week workshop). A course may comprise two or more sections, e.g., four sections of a freshman English course. Credit toward graduation or completion of a program of studies generally is given pupils for the successful completion of a course.

A cocurricular activity is an aspect of the total curriculum, under the direction of the school but generally not provided in typical classes, for which participation generally is not required and credit generally is not given. Such activities often include camp experiences, student organizations, intramural and interscholastic athletics, entertainments, assembly programs, publications, clubs, band, orchestra, pupil participation in school government, and service activities. When these activities are managed by pupils under the guidance or supervision of staff members they generally are referred to as student body activities. Activities in which participation is required or for which units of value are given usually are considered to be courses. In some situations, a given activity (e.g., orchestra) may serve as a cocurricular (noncredit) activity for many participants and as a course for others. (See also p. 242.)

Items of information used in describing the program of studies of which a class or course may be a part are included in the 30000 Series. Items used for scheduling are included in the 50000 Series. Some items of information which may be used in the evaluation of a self-contained class, course, or cocurricular activity are included in chapter 4 under item X0700, Evaluation and Curriculum Improvement and, more specifically, under item X0754.

ITEMS DESCRIBING A SECTION OR INSTRUCTIONAL SERVICE ACTIVITY

A class (or a section of a course, self-contained class, or cocurricular activity) is a group of pupils assigned to one or more teachers or other staff members for a given period of time for instruction or other activity in a situation where the teacher(s) and the pupils are in the presence of each other. This instruction or activity may be in subject matter of very broad scope as in a self-contained class in the elementary school, in subject matter of very narrow scope as in certain college-level courses, or in cocurricular activity areas of varying scope. A course or cocurricular activity may comprise a single section or it may comprise several sections, as in a Freshman English course having several classes frequently referred to as "sections;" similarly, a specific type of self-contained class may comprise a single section or it may comprise several sections as in a school having several sections of the fourth grade. Items of information about the type of self-contained class, course, or co-curricular activity of which a specific section is a part are included under the 40000 Series.

An instructional service is an activity which has as its purpose teaching, aiding teaching, improving the quality of teaching, or directing and managing an aspect of instruction. Among services supporting instruction are resource services for pupils, pupil personnel services, services for the instructional staff, and community services. Items of information about the services provided by a school system or school are included under items 13200 and 23200 of this chapter and under item X3200 of chapter 4.

Categories of information in the 50000 series may be used to identify factors involved in scheduling or describing a specific section or service activity, e.g., class or service identification information, relevant time factors, staff members, pupils, and teaching space or other location. This includes the items that comprise a master schedule for a school. This master schedule is the printed document or other record indicating how pupils and teachers have been assigned into instructional spaces at given times for instruction or other activities. A study of this schedule can provide much information about the school since it indicates, among other things, the size and resources of the school, the scope of courses available to pupils, the whereabouts and activities of specific individuals at given times, and even the school's philosophy.

Scheduling for a service activity is similar to scheduling for a section in that staff members are scheduled to be available to provide their service in a facility or space at given times; it differs in that pupils are scheduled as the need arises or as their needs are determined during the school term, rather than on a predetermined regular schedule for the entire term.

Definitions of Items of Information About Curriculum and Instruction

This chapter contains the definitions of the items of information which are classified in chapter 3.

The organization of this chapter differs from that of chapter 3 in that the items of this chapter are organized on the basis of category of information (for example: identification, time elements, pupils served, subject matter, location of instruction, and medium of instruction) while the items of chapter 3 are organized on the basis of level of organization (i.e., school system; school; program of studies; self-contained class, course, or cocurricular activity; and section or service activity).

The numbering system of this chapter reflects its organization. The first place of the number contains an "X," indicating that this place might be used for one or more levels of organization, especially those indicated by the numbers in parentheses following the category heading.¹ (For example, item X 02 11, Name (1, 2) on page 59 is the basis for item 1 02 11 on page 21, School system name, and item 2 02 11 on page 29, Name of school.) The second and third digits of the numbering system represent the major category of information, and provide the basis for the organization of items in this chapter.² These first 3 digits—with the first place containing a number—provide the basis for the organization of items in chapter 3. The digits following represent subdivisions of these categories.

Information about curriculum and instruction is essential for individual schools and school systems throughout the United States and its outlying areas. Those items of information which are basic and are therefore recommended as needed for operating most schools and local school systems are identified in this chapter and in chapter 3 by the designation "Rec." Those items of information which are important and may be collected and maintained at the option of individual schools and school systems are identified by the designation "Op."³ Additional items may be collected and maintained by individual schools and school systems at their own option as needed for their own purposes. Where a school system has a need to expand its system of information about curriculum and instruction, the expansion should be done in such a way that any additional items of information are readily classifiable under the headings presented in this handbook.

The type of instructional program for which an item of information should be collected and maintained is indicated in this chapter by a designation placed after each item of information. Such designations, repetitions of similar designations presented in chapter 3, are included in this chapter for the sake of convenience and are as follows:

- All—All instructional programs (i.e., the four programs listed below).
- Elem—Elementary school instructional program.
- Sec—Secondary school instructional program.
- JrC—Instructional program for college credit.
- AdEd—Adult education instructional program.

SPECIFICATIONS (4, 5) X 01 00 Series

Specifications (i.e., detailed description of operational requirements and self-imposed standards) may serve as a basis for making schedules and assignments, evaluating current practices, identifying immediate and long-range needs, and planning.

³The use of the designations "Rec" and "Op" in this handbook is not intended to prescribe practice; it is intended to provide guidance to persons and groups establishing or reviewing their system of information about curriculum and instruction. Assigned on the basis of consensus among representatives of groups participating in the development of this handbook (see p. vii), these designations serve to identify items of information considered most important for the sound operation of schools, and probably reflect to an extent the frequency of use of these items.

²These major categories are outlined on pp. 4 and 10.

X 01 00. SPECIFICATIONS FOR CLASS, COURSE, OR SERVICE ACTIVITY (4, 5)

Items of information may be included under this heading to describe requirements, or "specifications", for self-contained classes, courses, co-curricular activities, and services supporting instruction. (Op-All) For this purpose, items about subject matter may be drawn from chapters 5 and 6 of this handbook and from the X2100 Series in this chapter. Items about instructional media may be drawn from the X4200 Series. Items about prerequisite entrance requirements for pupils may be obtained from the X1000 Series or from Handbook V, Pupil Accounting for Local and State School Systems.⁴ Items about minimum time requirements may be drawn from the X0600 Series. Items about requirements for facilities (including special instructional spaces), equipment, and supplies may be obtained from the X3500 Series, X3600 Series, or from Handbook III, Property Accounting for Local and State School Systems.⁵ Items about required qualification of staff members may be drawn from Handbook IV, Staff Accounting for Local and State School Systems.⁶

A given section of a self-contained class, course, or cocurricular activity may be described under this heading with additional details about requirements and practices which are unique when contrasted with those of other sections of the same type of self-contained class, course, or cocurricular activity. This may involve considerations such as special or unusual subject matter (see chapters 5 and 6), level of difficulty (the X0400 Series), pupils served (the X0900 Series), time of day (item X0685), length of class periods (item X0665), medium of instruction (the X4200 Series), methods of instruction (the X4300 Series), planned instructional outcomes for pupils (the X2300 Series), requirements for equipment and supplies (the X3600 Series), and qualifications of staff members.

(Rec-All) This term is generally considered to include individuals having impairments caused by a congenital anomaly (e.g., cleft palate, clubfoot, absence of some member, etc.), impairments caused by disease (e.g., poliomyelitis, bone tuberculosis, encephalitis and other neurological involvements which may result in conditions such as cerebral palsy or epilepsy, etc.), and impairments caused by accident (e.g., fractures or burns which cause contractures, etc.).

Socially and/or Emotionally Handicapped—Pupils identified by professionally qualified personnel as having a social and/or emotional handicap, e.g., emotionally disturbed and delinquency prone. Pupils having a cultural handicap are included under item X0945, Cultural Handicaps.

X 09 60.51

Emotionally Disturbed—Pupils identified by professionally qualified personnel as having an emotional handicap of such a nature and severity as to require one or more special services, whether or not such services are available. Pupils with Learning Disabilities—Pupils identified by professionally qualified personnel as having sharp deficits in one or a limited number of aspects of the cognitive processes (i.e., of the sensory, associative, and expressive processes) and marked underachievement when considering the general level or mode of their overall abilities. Many such pupils also are said to have "brain injury (Strauss syndrome)," "perceptual handicaps," or "minimal brain dysfunction." For reporting purposes, pupils with learning disabilities should be identified also according to other characteristics (as being within the normal range of pupils; as being gifted or talented; as being slow learners, mentally retarded, partially seeing, hard of hearing, or speech impaired; or as having other specified types of handicaps). In each case, the distinguishing features are (1) the sharp imbalance within the pupil's cognitive development and (2) a marked underachievement.

¹⁹ As the term is used in this handbook, the "mentally gifted" include individuals whose level of mental development is so far advanced that they have been identified by professionally qualified personnel as needing additional educational opportunities beyond what is provided by the usual school program if they are to be educated to the level of their ability.

²⁰ As the term is used in this handbook, the "talented" include individuals identified by professionally qualified personnel as being capable of high performance in one or more areas of special competence. Among these areas of special competence are intellectual ability; creativity; leadership ability and social adeptness; and facility in the productive and performing arts.

The instructional staff includes those persons whose full-time or part-time assigned activities consist of teaching, aiding teaching, supervising instruction, improving the quality of teaching, or directing and managing a school. Among such persons are teachers, supervisors of instruction, school librarians, audiovisual personnel, and other instructional specialists. This also includes the instructional supervision function of school principals. Teachers frequently are classified further to indicate whether they are classroom teachers or whether they communicate with their pupils through a medium such as television, radio, or correspondence.³⁹ It is recommended that the school system have, as a minimum, information about the number and certification status of personnel in the school system. (Rec)

Information about the staff members of the school system may be derived from the summaries provided in items X5620, X5630, and X5640 as well as from information about their specific assignments in sections and services as provided in item X3100.

(Op-All) It could encompass a summary of the number of staff members, by assignment, and be related to characteristics of staff members through staff identification numbers and the personnel records. At its option, a school or school system may maintain separately a list of staff members qualified but not currently active in instructing or directing certain courses, cocurricular activities, and service which are a part of the program of studies.

Classification of Items of Information About Subject-matter Areas and Cocurricular Activities

Chapters 5 and 6 are designed to assist local school systems and State education agencies in identifying and describing items of information about subject matter and cocurricular activities in elementary, secondary, junior college, and adult education instructional programs. Twenty subject-matter areas—plus one area for cocurricular activities and one area for general elementary education and general secondary education—including selected subject matter in each, have been identified and included in this handbook as representative of the subject matter provided in the instructional programs cited above. Seven of these areas are frequently referred to as vocational areas, and are Agriculture, Distributive Education, Health Occupations Education, Home Economics, Office Occupations, Technical Education, and Trade and Industrial Occupations.

The selection of the subject-matter areas, including the subject matter in them—classified in this chapter and described in chapter 6—was determined by (1) an extensive study of record and report forms of local school systems and State education agencies, (2) an extensive review of a wide range of professional literature concerned with subject-matter areas and cocurricular activities, and (3) conferences with numerous persons in State education agencies, local school systems, colleges and universities, and the Office of Education. In addition to being useful in identifying, classifying, and describing various aspects of subject matter, the 22 areas are intended to provide a means for relating teacher certification to selected subject-matter areas and cocurricular activities, as well as aspects of subject matter within them. The findings in the research of a wide range of literature and record and report forms closely parallel the subject-matter areas treated in chapters 5 and 6.

A coding system, appropriate for use in schools and school systems, is used which provides a distinct identity for each subject-matter area and for each of the classified items of information within it. The Cocurricular Activities and the General Elementary Education and General Secondary Education areas are coded in the same manner. Definitions of the items are found in chapter 6, and the page numbers on which the definitions are recorded are indicated in the column under the heading of "Definition page No." to the right of the items classified in this chapter.

Identification Numbers

The code numbers appearing at the left of the items of information included in the classifications are for identification purposes. Many of the items are refined to include one or more related subitems of information. The identification codes may be used with appropriate modifications in the collection, storage, retrieval, and transmission of information about subject matter and may be used by local and State school systems for both manual and machine methods of data processing. The interpretation of the 10-digit code used in chapters 5 and 6 is as follows:

- 00 First 2-digit position: subject-matter area
- 00 Second 2-digit position: principal segment of subject matter
- 00 Third 2-digit position: division of principal segment
- 00 Fourth 2-digit position: first-level detail of division of principal segment (in some cases principal segments are substructured into major aspects rather than discrete divisions of subject matter, the third 2-digit position being vacant with major aspects being identified in the fourth 2-digit position, e.g., Distributive Education and selected portions of Mathematics).

00 Fifth 2-digit position: second-level detail of division

Information According to Type of Instructional Program

Information about subject matter in instructional programs is essential for schools and school systems throughout the United States and its outlying areas. There are differences among local schools and school systems concerning selected aspects of subject matter emphasized in the various subject-matter areas. Those items of information which describe the subject matter of instruction provided in a local school or school system may be identified locally by inserting the designation "X" after them for the appropriate type of instructional program—elementary, secondary, junior college, or adult education. These designations may be recorded on the right-hand side of the page, beginning on this page. Thus, the arrangement of classifications of items and types of programs was designed to provide a specific descriptive reference when filled in by the user.

Cross-References

The cross-references used in this chapter and chapter 6 are as follow:

See An item followed by "(See . . .)" has become subsumed in the item to which cross-reference is made.

See also An item followed by "(See also . . .)" is also defined, with variation for a particular application, in the subject-matter area to which cross-reference is made.

For definition see An item followed by "(For definition see . . .)" has only one definition. This definition is in the subject-matter area to which cross-reference is made.

For description see An item followed by "(For description see . . .)" appears only under Technical Education and refers to substantive content in another subject-matter area. The term "description" indicates that the item referred to includes a description of the nature of the content at the technical level.

Included as An item followed by "(Included as . . .)" has only one definition. The definition is in the subject-matter area in which the item followed by "Included as" appears.

Definitions of Items of Information About Subject-Matter Areas and Cocurricular Activities

This chapter contains the definitions of the classified items of information in chapter 5. The classifications and numbering of the items in this chapter are identical with those in chapter 5.

The items of information in each of the 20 subject-matter areas represent (1) selected aspects of subject matter as appropriate for elementary, secondary, junior college, and adult education, and (2) a selection of items of information which will serve to describe the subject matter in a majority of the instructional programs across the Nation. Of the 20 subject-matter areas seven are identified with vocational education. These are Agriculture, Distributive Education, Health Occupations Education, Home Economics, Office Occupations, Technical Education, and Trade and Industrial Occupations. Of the 22 areas one is devoted to General Elementary Education and General Secondary Education and one to Cocurricular Activities.

The items of information about subject matter in this chapter are only briefly described; however, there are many items of information concerned with the organization and administration of curriculum and instruction which can be related to these items to provide additional description of subject matter. These items are classified and described in this handbook in chapters 3 and 4, respectively.

01.00 00 00 00

Agriculture is comprised of the group of related courses or units of subject matter which are organized for carrying on learning experiences concerned with preparation for or upgrading in occupations requiring knowledge and skills in agricultural subjects. The functions of agricultural production, agricultural supplies, agricultural mechanization, agricultural products (processing), ornamental horticulture, forestry, agricultural resources, and the services related thereto, are emphasized in the instruction designed to provide opportunities for pupils to prepare for or improve their competencies in agricultural occupations. An agricultural occupation may include one or any combination of these functions.

The Ad Hoc Committee for Agriculture applied the following rationale to the selection of the items for placement in the Agriculture area: (1) the items were determined by consensus of the committee to be appropriate to agriculture; (2) the items could be defined in brief form using only salient descriptive elements; and (3) the various items classified under Agriculture were identifiable by titles which the ad hoc committee considered to be most commonly used in agriculture.

Many items of information in chapters 3 and 4 are supportive to pupils, instructional staff, and subject matter in the instructional program. For examples see the items included in the X 07 00. Series.—Evaluation and Curriculum Improvement on pages 71–78 and the items included in the X 32 00. Series.—Services Supporting Instruction on pages 90–96. Graphic illustrations of these relationships are shown in table 7 on page 11 and in figure 2 on page 13.

Future Farmers of America (FFA) chapters and related leadership training and supervised occupational experience programs are significant integral activities which aid agricultural education in making contributions to the guidance and total general educational development of pupils. The Future Farmers of America and related leadership training permeate every aspect of the instructional program in agriculture. The foundation upon which the FFA is built includes leadership and character development, sportsmanship, cooperation, service, thrift, scholarship, improved agriculture, organized recreation, citizenship, and patriotism. (For a more detailed treatment of the aims and purposes of FFA

NOTE.—For the interpretation of the code numbering system see Identification Numbers in the introduction to chapter 5. For the key to the cross-referencing system see Cross-References in the introduction to chapter 5.

Art is comprised of the organized body of subject matter or related courses involving primarily visual, tactile, and kinesthetic expression. Included in instruction are the two-dimensional forms such as drawing, painting, or printmaking; the three-dimensional forms such as sculpture or pottery; other spatial concepts such as architecture and design for the performing arts; and the history and theory of art. Emphasis is placed upon the esthetic and creative factors of visual forms.

The Ad Hoc Committee for Art applied the following rationale to the selection of substantive content for placement in the Art subject-matter area: (1) the content was determined by consensus of the committee to be appropriate to art in terms of origin and meaning; (2) subject-matter items could be defined in brief form using only salient descriptive elements; and (3) the various aspects of organized subject matter classified under Art were identifiable by titles which the ad hoc committee considered to be most commonly used in current practice.

Opportunities are frequently provided outside of regular classtime for pupils to pursue the development of interests, skills, and knowledge in selected aspects of art as an extension of their classwork. These activities, when approved by appropriate school authorities and directed or supervised by qualified adults, are referred to as cocurricular activities. They may be designed for the participation of pupils as individuals or in groups. A variety of such activities is identified and classified categorically under 20.00 00 00 00 Cocurricular Activities in chapter 5 beginning on page 146; and they are discussed more fully in this chapter beginning on page 242.

Many items of information in chapters 3 and 4 are supportive to pupils, instructional staff, and subject matter in the instructional program. For examples see the items classified in the X 07 00. Series—Evaluation and Curriculum Improvement on pages 71–78, and the items classified in the X 32 00. Series—School Services Supporting Instruction on pages 90–96. Graphic illustrations of these relationships are shown in table 7 on page 11 and in figure 2 on page 13.

experiences which are designed to develop in pupils the attitudes, knowledge, skills, and understanding concerned with business principles and practices having applications for personal use and/or activities in the business world. Business also includes a wide variety of aspects of general education, e.g., subject matter from other subject areas such as English (language arts), social sciences/social studies, and mathematics.

The Ad hoc Committee for Business applied the following criteria to the selection of substantive content for placement in the Business subject-matter area: (1) the content was determined by consensus of the committee to be unique to business historically and in origin; (2) subject-matter items could be defined in brief form using only salient descriptive elements; and (3) the various aspects of organized subject matter classified under Business were identifiable by titles which were considered to be most commonly used in current practice.

Opportunities are frequently provided both during and outside regular classtime for pupils to develop interests, skills, and knowledge in selected aspects of business as an integral part of the instructional program. As an example, the Future Business Leaders of America provides additional opportunities to develop leadership, other qualities, and an understanding of the world of work in business. Such organized activities, under appropriate supervision, are referred to as cocurricular activities. They may be designed for participation of pupils as individuals or in groups, and are an integral part of classwork. A variety of activities is identified under 20.00 00 00 Cocurricular Activities in chapter 5 beginning on page 146; and they are described more fully in this chapter beginning on page 242. As an illustration, the Future Business Leaders of America is identified for reporting purposes and further described under Cocurricular Activities as Item 20.01 10 00 00.

Many items of information in chapters 3 and 4 are supportive to pupils, instructional staff, and subject matter in the instructional program. For examples see the items classified in the X 07 00. Series—Evaluation and Curriculum Improvement on pages 71–78, and the items classified in the X 32 00. Series—School Services Supporting Instruction on pages 90–96. Graphic illustrations of these relationships are shown in table 7 on page 11 and in figure 2 on page 13.

Included under this heading are the items of information which identify various subjects in business.

DISTRIBUTIVE EDUCATION

04.00 00 00 00

Distributive education includes various combinations of subject matter and learning experiences related to the performance of activities that direct the flow of goods and services, including their appropriate utilization, from the producer to the consumer or user. These activities include selling, and such sales-supporting functions as buying, transporting, storing, promoting, financing, marketing research and management.

Distributive education is comprised of programs of occupational instruction in the field of distribution and marketing. These programs are designed to prepare individuals to enter, or progress or improve competencies in, distributive occupations. Emphasis is on the development of attitudes, skills and understanding related to marketing, merchandising and management. Instruction is offered at the secondary, postsecondary, and adult education levels and is structured to meet the requirements for gainful employment and entrepreneurship at specified occupational levels. Distributive occupations are found in such areas of economic activity as retail and wholesale trade, finance, insurance, real estate, services and service trades, manufacturing, transportation, utilities, and communications.

The Ad Hoc Committee for Distributive Education applied the following rationale to the selection of the items for placement in the Distributive Education area: (1) the items were determined to be appropriate to distributive education in terms of recent vocational education legislation; (2) the items could be defined in brief form using only salient descriptive elements; and (3) the various items classified under Distributive Education were identifiable by titles which the ad hoc committee considered to be most appropriate to distributive education.

Opportunities to develop leadership, social and civic awareness, and increased understanding of the world of work in distribution and marketing are provided through the Distributive Education Clubs of America, the youth organization for distributive education pupils. As an integral part of the instructional program, pupils engage in activities that extend their interests, skills and knowledges in selected aspects of distribution and marketing. Such organized activities, under appropriate supervision, are referred to as cocurricular activities. A variety of activities is identified under 20.00 00 00 00 Cocurricular Activities in chapter 5 beginning on page 146; and they are discussed more fully in this chapter beginning on page 242. The Distributive Education Clubs of America may be identified for reporting purposes under Cocurricular Activities as Item 20.01 05 00 00.

Many items of information in chapters 3 and 4 are supportive to pupils, instructional staff, and subject matter in the instructional program. For examples see the items classified in the X 07 00. Series—Evaluation and Curriculum Improvement on pages 71–78 and the items classified in the X 32 00. Series—School Services Supporting Instruction on pages 90–96. Graphic illustrations of these relationships are shown in table 7 on page 11 and in figure 2 on page 13.

The Ad Hoc Committee for English Language Arts applied the following rationale to the selection of substantive content for placement in the English Language Arts subject-matter area: (1) the content was determined by consensus of the committee to be appropriate to English language arts; (2) subject-matter items could be defined in brief form using only salient descriptive elements; and (3) the various aspects of organized subject matter classified under English Language Arts were identifiable by titles which were considered to be most commonly used in current practice.

Opportunities are frequently provided both during and outside regular classtime for pupils to develop interests, skills, and knowledge in selected aspects of English language arts as an integral part of the instructional program. As an example, the Journalism Club provides additional opportunities to develop leadership, other qualities, and an understanding of the role of journalism in society. - 05.02 01 01 00 PHONETICS—The division of phonology dealing with the study and classification of the sounds of speech as spoken and heard.
- 05.02 01 02 00 PHONEMICS—The division of phonology dealing with the study of distinctive units and structural patterns within the sound system of a specific language or dialect.
- 05.02 02 00 00 Grammar—The division of linguistics including primarily morphology and syntax; hence the study by various methods of the structural devices by which the meaning-bearing units of a language (morphemes, words, phrases, sentences) are identified and their relationships indicated.
- 05.02 02 01 00 TRADITIONAL GRAMMAR—The study of the type of English grammar commonly taught in schools from the nineteenth century on, generally using semantic criteria for identifying "parts of speech" and other categories derived from Latin grammar, emphasizing sentence analysis, and often normative in character and prescriptive in application.
- 05.02 02 02 00 STRUCTURAL GRAMMAR (DESCRIPTIVE)—Study concerned with the type of grammar which objectively describes and analyzes the structure of a language in terms of (1) formally identifiable units in a hierarchy of increasingly complex combinations and (2) the immediate and ultimate constituents of sentences. (The term "Descriptive Grammar," sometimes used as an equivalency of "Structural Grammar," properly includes any kind of grammar derived inductively from objective observation of a body of utterances in a language.)
- 05.02 02 03 00 GENERATIVE GRAMMAR—The type of grammar which uses a set of rules, in a required order, capable of generating (or accounting for) all possible grammatically acceptable sentences of a language. The rules are commonly expressed as formulas composed of symbols standing for linguistic units and operations.
- 05.02 02 04 00 TRANSFORMATIONAL GRAMMAR—A type of grammar (usually generative, q.v.) which explains certain constructions as being derived from others by processes of structural change without change of meaning (i.e., by transformations).

- ered by general rules, are employed (the descriptive approach) or should be employed (the prescriptive approach). The features may be grammatical, lexical, or other, and they may be seen in relation to (1) the social of esthetic milieu (e.g., illiterate, common, and cultivated) and (2) the use they are put to (e.g., conversation, or formal address). In school practice, where a standard form of the language is to be inculcated, the prescriptive approach necessarily obtains; this is acceptable, however, if prescriptions are soundly based on accurate descriptions.
- 05.02 04 00 00 History of the English Language—The study of the ways in which the Anglo-Saxon dialects transplanted to Britain in the fifth century A.D. developed in the course of time into the language called "English," today. Any or all aspects of the broad subject are included, but attention centers especially on the "outer history" (the influence of nonlinguistic factors such as social and political change) and the "inner history" (the processes of general language change as they affected this specific language).
- 05.02 05 00 00 Dialectology—The study of the features of a language, written or spoken (sounds, forms, constructions, words), as they vary individually or in related groups with respect to their distribution, geographical or social. Theoretically, it can be synchronic (of a single point in time); practically, it is diachronic (historical), since the variations can be understood only as the result of developments occurring over a span of years. "Dialects" are often thought of as those varieties within a language which have more features in common with each other than they have separately.
- 05.02 06 00 00 Semantics (Semology)—The historical and descriptive study of meaning as a linguistic phenomenon, including the structure of the meaning system of a language or set of languages; the components of meaning and their combination in larger structures of meaning; the association of meanings with morphemes and words; and the systematic study of meaning change. This approach is to be distinguished from GENERAL SEMANTICS (see 05.04 01 03 General Semantics), which is defined by Webster III as "a doctrine and educational discipline due to Alfred Korzybski (1879-1950) intended to improve habits of response of human beings to their environment and one another especially by training in the better and more critical uses of words and other symbols." Specifically, the study of SEMANTICS deals with meaning as a system within the overall structure of language; GENERAL SEMANTICS deals with meaning as a relationship between linguistic signs and the outside world.
- 05.02 07 00 00 Study About Language—A cover term used to include any instruction about language or languages (as distinct from instruction in a language or training in the skills of using language) which may be included in the curriculum from the elementary grades on, but which is not formal and developed sufficiently to be denominated LINGUISTICS (q.v.).
- 05.02 99 00 00 Other Linguistics—Include here other organized subject matter and experiences emphasized in linguistics which are not listed above. (Specify.)
- 05.03 00 00 00 LITERATURE
The study of printed materials which have noteworthy content and excellence of style, and which may be identified by country, type, and/or period of time. Such study may be directed to bodies of national literature such as American and British, or may be more inclusive as in World Literature, which term usually includes Oriental literary works. The types usually considered in the study of literature are biography, drama, essay, fiction, and poetry. Myths and legends are sometimes considered as types. Often the focus is on specialized areas as in "Biblical literature" and "classical literature." Occasionally, literary works are selected for a special group as in "children's literature" and "literature for adolescents." For developing taste and critical judgment, writing and discussion are frequently a means of instruction in the study of literature.

- have aimed to reveal the character of the subject as well as the facts of his life. Biographies often serve to satisfy young peoples' search for ideals and values.
- 05.03 37 00 00 Drama—The study of a type of literature distinguished by plot, setting, theme, and characters engaged in movement and dialogue. It is distinguished from narrative by being a direct presentation of action. The main types and styles of dramatic literature usually studied are: tragedy, comedy, melodrama, farce, social drama of ideas, classical, romantic, realistic, impressionistic, and expressionistic. The structure of a drama, its plot, and the techniques by which character is revealed are primary items for consideration in the study of a drama. Dramas are often expressions of a philosophy or social point of view of the dramatist, and often serve as excellent revelations of the temper of a historical period or of a culture. Appreciation of the literary qualities of a drama may be enhanced by its being read as an artistic creation intended for performance on a stage.
- 05.03 38 00 00 Essay—The study of expository writings of a formal and informal kind. The formal may include short or extended articles which present ideas or information, the writer's purpose frequently being to set forth a central idea or thesis. Informal essays, or familiar essays as they are sometimes called, may be read for a revelation of the writer's personality and subjective reactions to an experience or to an event which he has observed.
- 05.03 39 00 00 Fiction—The study of short stories and novels with special attention to point of view, plot, character, setting, and theme. Frequently, teachers select fictional works in accordance with their suitability for pupils' developmental levels and their needs and interests.

Poems may be studied by types, or they may be arranged by theme and studied in relation to theme. They sometimes are studied within an historical framework of literary periods; when studied in such contexts they may be considered as expressions of the spirit of the era in which they were written. However, they have most frequently been regarded as revelations of writers' emotions and ideas.

- 05.03 67 00 00 Literature for Adolescents—The study of that portion of the larger body of literature which has both appeal and interest and
- can be understood by young people of the age range commonly called "adolescent." Literature for adolescents can be found in the various genres and can be obtained from both English and other sources.
- 05.03 68 00 00 Myth and Legend—The study of stories, ballads, and plays which have come from the oral tradition of national groups and which constitutes a part of their literature. Such folk material is sometimes organized as a unified body, but is more frequently combined with other literary works into thematic or type arrangements. - 05.03 69 00 00 Humanities—The study of a group of related subjects such as literature, art, music, religion, history, philosophy, and classical and modern languages—with literary works usually forming the core—concerned with man's individual cultural achievements and values in society as distinguished from social institutions and customs of the natural world. On the basis of the language used, the pupil selects from his ideas those which can best be arranged in a form to which an individual may respond. Mental ordering of the ideas precedes writing them. Ideas are explored, experimented with, and revised through writing.
- 05.04 01 01 00 Logic—The study of the formal principles frequently included in composition courses with the objective of improving the reasoning of the writer. Principles of inductive and deductive thinking and possible errors in such thinking form the basis of this instruction. Some of the topics usually included in the study of inductive reasoning are: the testing of the adequacy of evidence; the validity of generalizations; the cause and effect relationship—oversimplification and the attribution of false cause; the invalidating factor of difference in reasoning by analogy. The validity of the premises and their relationship to each other and to the conclusion in a syllogism are the essential topics in the study of deductive reasoning. The work in logic in a composition course also usually includes attention to the pitfalls of circular reasoning, begging the question, avoiding the issue, and arriving at a false or irrelevant conclu-

- 05.04 01 02 00 RHETORIC—The study of the art of discourse and its various meanings, one of which is the same as that of "composition." Composition courses are sometimes referred to as rhetoric courses. Originally, in classic times, the term was applied to oratory, but in modern times it is also applied to written communication. Considered as the theory of composition, the term applies to the principles and rules of composition formulated by ancient critics and modified through the ages by theorists of the composing art. Generally, the subject matter and experiences involved in the study of these principles and rules are designed to aid in the arrangement of a speech or written discourse to bring about a desired effect on a listener or reader. Emphasized are: methods of persuasion; the effective and orderly arrangement of the parts of a discourse; style; and rhetoric as a system of gathering, arranging, and expressing the subject matter of discourse, and as a guide for making decisions in the process of composition. (See also 05.05 01 00 00 Rhetoric and Public Address under Speech.)
- 05.04 01 03 00 GENERAL SEMANTICS—The body of principles sometimes included for study and application in composition courses. The primary purpose of general semantics as a discipline, or as a point of view, in the field of communication is to improve language habits so that verbal symbols correspond more exactly to persons, things, and events on the nonverbal or fact level. It is the study of evaluative processes, the ways in which a person interprets his environment through signs and symbols, including language. Attention is usually given to: factual as distinguished from inferential statements; multivalued in nature as distinguished from two-valued orientation in the language of writers or speakers; verbal abstractions as distinguished from low-order terms; indexing or noting differences to avoid stereotyping; dating to avoid rigidity; emotive language and its effects on human behavior; the distinction between a thing and its label or name; and the contexts of language.

FOREIGN LANGUAGES

06.00 00 00 00

The body of subject matter in this area is comprised of a variety of foreign languages, including English as a foreign language. Classified under this heading are the various classical and modern foreign languages.

Usually, the activities involved in the teaching and learning of a foreign language are planned in terms of selected objectives:

1. to assist the pupil in acquiring progressive proficiency in the control of the skills of listening comprehension, speaking, reading, and writing, and in structural analysis;
2. to develop the pupil's capacity to apply these acquired skills in understanding, analyzing, and interpreting a variety of forms of past and current thought;
3. to increase the pupil's knowledge and understanding of the countries, cultures, and attitudes of the peoples whose language is being learned.

The Ad Hoc Committee for Foreign Languages applied the following rationale to the selection of the languages for placement in the Foreign Languages area: (1) the various languages selected and classified were determined by the ad hoc committee as including the languages most frequently taught in the United States; and (2) the various languages selected for placement under Classical Languages and Modern Foreign Languages could be defined in brief form using only salient descriptive elements.

Opportunities are frequently provided both during and outside regular classtime for pupils to develop interests, skills, and knowledge in selected aspects of foreign languages as an integral part of the instructional program. As an example, the Foreign Language Club provides additional opportunities to apply various acquired skills, increase knowledge about different countries, and develop appreciation for the role of foreign languages in communication. Such organized activities, under appropriate supervision, are referred to as cocurricular activities. HEALTH OCCUPATIONS EDUCATION

07.00 00 00 00

Education for health occupations comprises the body of related subject matter, or the body of related courses, and planned experiences designed to impart knowledge and develop understanding and skills required to support the health professions. Instruction is organized to prepare pupils for occupational objectives concerned with assisting qualified personnel in providing diagnostic, therapeutic, preventive, restorative, and rehabilitative services to people, including understanding and skills essential to provide care and health services to patients.

Education for health workers usually is conducted by recognized education agencies and appropriate health institutions and services that can make available the quality and kind of experiences needed by the trainee in developing the competencies required for his occupational goal.

Instructional programs which prepare persons for occupations that render health services directly to patients provide planned instruction and experience in appropriate clinical situations. For occupations that render health services which do not involve direct services to patients, planned instruction and experience in laboratories and/or appropriate work situations are provided as an integral part of the instructional program.

Licensure, Certification, and Registration

Techniques for the regulation of workers in health occupations have been developed and administered, either by appropriate professional organizations or by legally constituted authority in the respective States, as a means to safeguarding the public against unqualified and/or unscrupulous persons. Therefore, regulatory procedures such as licensure, certification, and/or registration in certain of the health occupations have been established.

Licensure—Under the authority of a State, laws are enacted setting forth the minimum qualifications for persons and the standards to be met for practicing in an occupation. All physicians, nurses, dental hygienists, and a growing number of paramedical personnel must be licensed in their respective fields. Organizations representing these groups have sought and helped to establish State laws for licensing practitioners in their fields. They have also found that mandatory regulation of these occupations under State licensure laws best serves the public interest. Employers, too, have come to rely upon the legal licensing agency for assurance that a practitioner is qualified in his field.

Certification—Professional societies endeavor to improve the quality of services provided by supportive personnel in health fields through voluntary certification of individual workers. Standards pertaining to education, experience, and personal qualifications are determined by the professional society, usually in cooperation with the auxiliary group that is subject to the certification procedure. Applicants wishing to become certified under these standards must make application to the certifying board of the association and comply with the certification of standards.

Registration—The term registration is used by certain occupational groups interchangeably with either the term licensure or certification. "Registered" nurse connotes a nurse who is licensed to practice as a professional nurse or as a technical-level nurse. A "registered" medical librarian is certified by and registered with her professional association. Registration may be interpreted in specific instances by placing after it (L) when "licensure" applies, or (C) when "certification" applies.

NOTE: In situations involving designation of "licensure," "certification," or "registration" for record and/or report purposes as applicable to selected items in this subject-matter area, the following symbols may be used: (L) for Licensure; (C) for Certification; and (R) for Registration.

The Ad Hoc Committee for Health Occupations Education applied the following rationale to the selection of substantive content for placement in the Health Occupations Education area: (1) the items selected and classified were determined by consensus of the committee to be representative of the subject matter most commonly taught in health occupations education in the United States; (2) the various aspects of subject matter were identified by titles which were considered as being most commonly used; and (3) the various aspects of subject matter selected for placement under Health Occupations Education could be defined in brief form using only salient descriptive elements.

Many items of information in chapters 3 and 4 are supportive to pupils, instructional staff, and subject matter in the instructional program. For examples, see the items classified in the X 07 00. Series.—Evaluation and Curriculum Improvement on pages 71–78, and the items classified in the X 32 00. Series.—School Services Supporting Instruction on pages 90–96. HEALTH AND SAFETY IN DAILY LIVING,
PHYSICAL EDUCATION, AND RECREATION
08.00 00 00 00

The body of related subject matter and activities in health and safety in daily living, physical education, and recreation are organized for carrying on learning experiences concerned with developing (1) knowledge, attitudes, appreciations, and conduct essential to individual and group health; (2) awareness of, concern for, and knowledge, skills, and judgment necessary for practicing and promoting personal and public safety in the home, at school, on the job, and in traffic; and (3) physical and mental growth and fitness by means of activities designed to improve the muscles, motor skills, and attitudes and habits of conduct of individuals and groups.

The Ad Hoc Committee for Health and Safety in Daily Living, Physical Education, and Recreation applied the following rationale to the selection of items for placement in the Health and Safety in Daily Living, Physical Education, and Recreation area: (1) the items were determined by consensus of the committee to be especially appropriate to health and safety in daily living, physical education, and recreation; (2) the items could be defined in brief form using only salient descriptive elements; and (3) the various items were identifiable by titles which the ad hoc committee considered to be most commonly used in current practice.

Opportunities are frequently provided both during and outside regular classtime for pupils to develop interests, skills, and knowledge in selected aspects of health and safety in daily living, physical education and recreation as an integral part of the instructional program. As an example, the Girls' Athletic Association provides additional opportunities to develop leadership, citizenship, and other qualities. Such organized activities, under appropriate supervision, are referred to as co-curricular activities. They may be designed for participation of pupils as individuals or in groups. A variety of activities is identified under 20.00 00 00 00 Cocurricular Activities in chapter 5 beginning on

09.00 00 00 00

Home economics comprises the group of related courses or units of instruction organized for purposes of enabling pupils to acquire knowledge and develop understanding, attitudes, and skills relevant to (a) personal, home, and family life, and (b) occupational preparation using the knowledge and skills of home economics. The subject matter of home economics includes, in addition to that which is unique to the area, concepts drawn from the natural and social sciences and the humanities.

The Ad Hoc committee for Home Economics applied the following rationale to the selection of the items for placement in the Home Economics area: (1) the items were determined by consensus of the committee to be appropriate to home economics in terms of preparation for personal, home, and family living, and for occupational preparation; (2) the items could be defined in brief form using only salient descriptive elements; and (3) the various items classified under Home Economics were identifiable by titles which were considered to be in current use in home economics.

Opportunities to develop leadership, social and civic awareness, and increased understanding of the world of work in home economics are provided through the Future Homemakers of America, a youth organization for home economics pupils. As an integral part of the instructional program, pupils in this organization engage in activities that extend their interests, skills, and knowledge in many aspects of home economics. Such organized activities, under appropriate supervision, are referred to as co-curricular activities. A variety of activities is identified under 20.00 00 00 00 Cocurricular Activities in chapter 5 beginning on page 146; they are discussed more fully in this chapter beginning on page 242. The Future Homemakers of America are identified for reporting purposes and further described under Cocurricular Activities as Item 20.01 12 00 00.

11.01 00 00 00 ELEMENTARY - SCHOOL MATHEMATICS (K-6)

Mathematics subject matter, designed for the elementary school, which usually is concerned with the study of various aspects of arithmetic, informal algebra, and informal geometry. An overall goal is understanding accompanied by reasonable efficiency in both the computational and applicational phases of mathematics. Toward this end certain emphases permeate all topics and all grade levels. Among these are (1) the use of manipulative and pictured materials to clarify ideas and to build meanings; (2) recognition of the role of mathematics in real life and its use in problem solving situations; (3) the rationale of the decimal numeration system and of the algorithms of the operations; (4) the relationships which exist within a single operation, between two operations, and among the four operations; (5) the continuous development of the concepts which are basic to any topic studied, from the simplest beginnings to whatever extensions and expansions are consistent with the learner's ability to comprehend; (6) provision for prerequisite learnings for later topics; (7) the use of methods which will interest, stimulate, and motivate the pupil; and (8) appropriate adjustments for variations in the abilities of pupils.

In practice, the subject matter usually is organized on a spiral plan. By means of this plan pupils study the same subject-matter topic two or more years or grade-placement levels, each time at a higher level of difficulty. - 11.14 00 00 00 LIBERAL ARTS MATHEMATICS
An organization of subject matter concerned with the cultural relevance and meaning of mathematics designed for pupils for whom technical mathematics is inappropriate. Sometimes this is a full-year course for elementary teachers; but frequently the course for elementary teachers is separate and more specialized. Usually, the subject matter of liberal arts mathematics is not designed to comprise a part of a sequential prerequisite for calculus, or science, or engineering courses. The subject matter is not standard, but is usually chosen to illustrate the role of mathematics in the development of western civilization, the philosophy and the nature of mathematics, and the relation of mathematics to logic.
Often miniature deductive geometries of algebraic systems of novel subject matter are included. Material from number theory has been found to be interesting and to require a minimum of technique. Some stochastic models are usually introduced for contrast with deterministic ones. The number system and its history was formerly considered good material for this course but recently has come to be regarded as inappropriate because pupils regard it as familiar to the point of contempt.

MUSIC

12.00 00 00 00

Music is the fine art that utilizes sounds in time in a meaningful and organized manner. Subject matter and activities in music are designed to impart the skills and knowledge necessary for the understanding, appreciation, creation, performance, and enjoyment of music.

The Ad Hoc Committee for Music applied the following rationale to the selection of the items for placement in the Music area: (1) the various items selected and classified were determined by consensus of the committee to include the aspects of music most commonly taught in the United States; (2) the various aspects of subject matter selected for classification could be defined in brief form using only salient descriptive elements; and (3) the items were identifiable by titles which were considered to be most commonly used in current practice in music.

Opportunities are frequently provided both during and outside regular classtime for pupils to develop interests, skills, and knowledge in selected aspects of music as an integral part of the instructional program. As an example, the Music Club provides additional opportunities to explore interests, apply various acquired skills, increase knowledge about different aspects of music, and develop appreciation for music in our culture. Such organized activities, under appropriate supervision, are referred to as cocurricular activities. A variety of activities is identified under 20.00 00 00 00 Cocurricular Activities in chapter 5 beginning on page 146; and they are described more fully in this chapter beginning on page 242. As an illustration, the Music Club is identified for reporting purposes under Cocurricular Activities as Item 20.01 21 00 00.

Many items of information in chapters 3 and 4 are supportive to pupils, instructional staff, and subject matter in the instructional program. For examples, see the items classified in the X 07 00. Series—Evaluation and Curriculum Improvement on pages 71–78, and the items classified in the X 32 00. Series—School Services Supporting Instruction on pages 90–96. Graphic illustrations of these relationships are shown in table 7 on page 11 and in figure 2 on page 13.

Included in this subject-matter area are the items of information which identify the various subjects in the music area.

NATURAL SCIENCES

13.00 00 00 00

The natural sciences include the body of related subject matter, or the body of related courses, organized for carrying on learning experiences concerned with knowledge of the physical and biological world, and of the processes of discovering and validating this knowledge.

The Ad Hoc Committee for Natural Sciences applied the following rationale to the selection of substantive content for placement in the Natural Sciences area: (1) the items selected and classified were determined by the committee as representing the subject matter most commonly taught in natural sciences in the United States; (2) the various aspects of subject matter were identified by titles which were considered as being most commonly used; and (3) the various aspects of subject matter could be defined in brief form using only salient descriptive elements.

Opportunities are frequently provided both during and outside regular classtime for pupils to develop interests, skills, and knowledge in selected aspects of natural sciences as an integral part of the instructional program. As an example, the Science Club provides additional opportunities to pursue personal interests, apply various acquired skills, increase knowledge in selected aspects of science, and develop leadership qualities through club activities. Such organized activities, under appropriate supervision, are referred to as cocurricular activities. A variety of activities is identified under 20.00 00 00 Cocurricular Activities in chapter 5 beginning on page 146; and they are described more fully in this chapter beginning on page 242. As an illustration, the Science Club is identified for reporting purposes under Cocurricular Activities as Item 20.01 28 00 00.

Many items of information in chapters 3 and 4 are supportive to pupils, instructional staff, and subject matter in the instructional program. For examples, see the items classified in the X 07 00. Series—Evaluation and Curriculum Improvement on pages 71–78, and the items classified in the X 32 00. Series—School Services Supporting Instruction

OFFICE OCCUPATIONS

14.00 00 00 00

This body of subject matter, or combinations of courses and practical experience, is organized into programs of instruction to provide opportunities for pupils to prepare for and achieve career objectives in selected office occupations. In the instructional process various aspects of subject matter frequently are drawn from other subject-matter areas. Learning experiences are designed to lead to employment and/or advancement of individuals in occupations in public or private enterprises or organizations related to the facilitating function of the office. "Facilitating function," as used here refers to the expediting role played by office occupations as the connecting link between the production and distribution activities of an organization. Included is a variety of activities, such as recording and retrieval of data, supervision and coordination of office activities, internal and external communication, and the reporting of information.

The Ad Hoc Committee for Office Occupations applied the following criteria to the selection of substantive content for placement in the Office Occupations subject-matter area: (1) the content was determined by consensus of the committee to be unique and appropriate to office occupations in terms of the Vocational Education Act of 1963; (2) subject-matter items could be defined in brief form using only salient descriptive elements; and (3) the various aspects of organized subject matter classified under Office Occupations were identifiable by titles which the ad hoc committee considered to be most appropriate to office occupations.

Opportunities are frequently provided both during and outside regular classtime for pupils to develop interests, skills, and knowledge in selected aspects of office occupations as an integral part of the instructional program. As an example, the Office Education Association provides additional opportunities to develop leadership, other qualities, and an understanding of the world of work in office occupations. Such organized activities, under appropriate supervision, are referred to as cocurricular activities. They may be designed for participation of pupils as individuals or in groups, and are an integral part of classwork. A variety of activities is identified under 20.00 00 00 00 Cocurricular Activities in chapter 5 beginning on page 146; and they are discussed more fully in this chapter beginning on page 242. As an illustration the Office Education Association is identified for reporting purposes and further described under Cocurricular Activities as Item 20.01 25 00 00.

Many items of information in chapters 3 and 4 are supportive to pupils, instructional staff, and subject matter in the instructional program. For examples see the items classified in the X 07 00. Series—Evaluation and Curriculum Improvement on pages 71–78, and the items classified in the X 32 00. Series—School Services Supporting Instruction on pages 90–96. SOCIAL SCIENCES/SOCIAL STUDIES

15.00 00 00 00

The social sciences/social studies are comprised of interrelated subject matter organized to impart knowledge, develop skills, and identify goals concerning elements and institutions of human society in the disciplines of history, economics, political science, sociology, anthropology, psychology, geography, and philosophy.

The social studies are comprised of those aspects of the above which in practice are selected for instructional purposes in schools and colleges. Social studies are usually socially oriented with regard to aims and subject matter concerning the elements and institutions of human society.

Employing systematic, analytical, and theoretical methods, the social sciences include modes of inquiry such as historical or genetic approaches, survey research, experimentation, content analysis, and logical analysis. Illustrative methods as techniques include: field studies, case studies, statistical analysis, map and photo interpretations, simulation, participant observation, polling, questionnaires, and others.

The Ad Hoc Committee for Social Sciences/Social Studies applied the following rationale to the selection of substantive content for placement in the Social Sciences/Social Studies area: (1) the items selected and classified were determined by the committee as representing the subject matter most commonly taught in this area in the United States; (2) the various aspects of subject matter were identified by titles which were considered as being most commonly used; and (3) the items included in the classification could be defined in brief form using only salient descriptive elements.

Opportunities are frequently provided both during and outside regular classtime for pupils to develop interests, skills, and knowledge in selected aspects of the social sciences/social studies as an integral part of the instructional program. As an example, the International Relations Club provides additional opportunities to pursue personal interests, apply various acquired skills such as research, and increase knowledge in selected aspects of the social sciences/social studies, and develop leadership qualities through club activities. Such organized activities, under appropriate supervision, are referred to as cocurricular activities. A variety of activities is identified under 20.00 00 00 00 Cocurricular Activities in chapter 5 beginning on page 146; and they are described more fully in this chapter beginning on page 242. As an illustration, the International Relations Club is identified for reporting purposes under Cocurricular Activities as Item 20.01 16 00 00.

Many items of information in chapters 3 and 4 are supportive to pupils, instructional staff, and subject matter in the instructional program. For examples see the items classified in the X 07 00. Series—Evaluation and Curriculum Improvement on pages 71–78, and the items classified in the X 32 00. Series—School Services Supporting Instruction on pages 90–96. Graphic illustrations of these relationships are shown in table 7 on page 11 and in figure 2 on page 13.

Included in this subject-matter area are the items of information which identify various subjects in the social sciences/social studies.

TECHNICAL EDUCATION

16.00 00 00 00

Technical education is concerned with that body of knowledge organized in a planned sequence of classroom and laboratory experiences, usually at the postsecondary level, to prepare pupils for a cluster of job opportunities in a specialized field of technology. The program of instruction normally includes the study of the underlying sciences and supporting mathematics inherent in a technology, as well as methods, skills, materials, and processes commonly used and services performed in the technology. A planned sequence of study and extensive knowledge in a field of specialization is required in technical education, including competency in the basic communication skills and related general education. Technical education prepares for the occupational area between the skilled craftsman and the professional person such as the physician, the engineer, and the scientist.

The technical education curriculum is so structured that it prepares the graduate to enter a job and be productive with a minimum of additional training after employment. It is designed to provide a background of knowledge and skills which will enable an individual to advance with the developments in the technology, and enables him, with a reasonable amount of experience and additional education, to advance into positions of increased responsibility.

The technician frequently is employed in direct support of the professional employee. For example, the engineering technician will be capable of performing such duties as assisting in the following engineering functions: designing, developing, testing, modifying of products and processes, production planning, writing reports, and preparing estimates; analyzing and diagnosing technical problems that involve independent decisions; and solving a wide range of technical problems by applying his background in the technical specialties—science, mathematics, and communicative and citizenship skills.

The Ad Hoc Committee for Technical Education applied the following rationale to the selection of substantive content for placement in the Technical Education area: (1) the items selected and classified were determined as representing the subject matter most commonly taught in technical education in the United States; (2) the various aspects of subject matter were identified by titles which were considered as being most commonly used; and (3) the various aspects of subject matter selected for placement under Technical Education could be defined in brief form using only salient descriptive elements.

Many items of information in chapters 3 and 4 are supportive to pupils, instructional staff, and subject matter in the instructional program. For examples see the items classified in the X 07 00. Series—Evaluation and Curriculum Improvement on pages 71–78, and the items classified in the X 32 00. Series—School Services Supporting Instruction on pages 90–96. Graphic illustrations of these relationships are shown in table 7 on page 11 and in figure 2 on page 13.

TRADE AND INDUSTRIAL OCCUPATIONS

17.00 00 00 00

Trade and industrial occupations is the branch of vocational education which is concerned with preparing persons for initial employment, or for upgrading or retraining workers in a wide range of trade and industrial occupations. Such occupations are skilled or semiskilled and are concerned with layout designing, producing, processing, assembling, testing, maintaining, servicing, or repairing any product or commodity. Instruction is provided (1) in basic manipulative skills, safety judgment, and related occupational information in mathematics, drafting, and science required to perform successfully in the occupation, and (2) through a combination of shop or laboratory experiences simulating those found in industry and classroom learning. Included is instruction for apprentices in apprenticeable occupations or for journeymen already engaged in a trade or industrial occupation. Also included is training for service and certain semiprofessional occupations considered to be trade and industrial in nature.

The Ad Hoc Committee for Trade and Industrial Occupations applied the following criteria to the selection of substantive content for placement in the subject-matter area: (1) the content was determined by consensus of the committee to be unique and appropriate to trade and industrial occupations; (2) subject-matter items could be defined in brief form using only salient descriptive elements; and (3) the various aspects of organized subject matter were identifiable by titles which the ad hoc committee considered to be most appropriate to trade and industrial occupations.

Opportunities are frequently provided both during and outside regular classtime for pupils to develop interests, skills, and knowledge in selected aspects of trade and industrial occupations as an integral part of the instructional program. As an example, the Vocational Industrial Clubs of America provide additional opportunities to develop leadership, civic responsibilities, other qualities, and an understanding of the world of work in trade and industrial occupations. Such organized activities, under appropriate supervision, are referred to as cocurricular activities. They may be designed for participation of pupils as individuals or in groups. GENERAL ELEMENTARY EDUCATION AND GENERAL SECONDARY EDUCATION

18.00 00 00 00

The terms General Elementary Education and General Secondary Education, as classified in chapter 5 and defined in chapter 6 of this handbook, usually refer to instruction which takes place in a self-contained class. Learning experiences are concerned with the knowledges, skills, appreciations, attitudes, and behavioral characteristics considered to be needed by all pupils in terms of the broad educational outcomes which should be achieved by all pupils to the limits of their capacities during the elementary and secondary school years or grades.

The Ad Hoc Committee for General Elementary Education and General Secondary Education applied the following rationale to the selection of items for placement in the General Elementary Education and General Secondary Education area: (1) the items were determined by consensus of the committee to be appropriate in terms of types of instructional organization; (2) the items could be defined in brief form using only salient descriptive elements; and (3) the various types of instructional organization classified were identifiable by titles which the committee considered to be most commonly used in current practice.

The items of information in chapters 3 and 4 are supportive to general elementary education and general secondary education instructional programs. For examples, see the items classified in the X 07 00. Series—Evaluation and Curriculum Improvement on pages 71–78, and the items classified in the X 32 00. Series—School Services Supporting Instruction on pages 90–96. Graphic illustrations of these relationships are shown in table 7 on page 11 and in figure 2 on page 13.

Included under the heading of General Elementary Education and General Secondary Education are items of information which identify selected types of instructional organizations for carrying on instruction.

18.01 00 00 00 GENERAL ELEMENTARY YEARS OR GRADES

18.01 01 01 00 PREPRIMARY LEVEL—Includes education during the year or years preceding the first grade. A prekindergarten or kindergarten class may be organized as a grade of an elementary school which includes the primary level, or it may be a part of a separate school. In some school systems such a group is called junior primary.

18.01 01 02 00 PRIMARY LEVEL (INCLUDING GRADES 1, 2, AND 3 OR EQUIVALENT)—Includes education during the years or grades preceding the intermediate elementary grades, usually years or grades 1, 2, and 3 or the equivalent.

DIFFERENTIALIZED CURRICULUM FOR HANDICAPPED PUPILS

19.00 00 00 00

The differentialized curriculum for handicapped pupils reflects an increasing awareness today of the individual needs of children. Many children with various types of handicaps cannot benefit from basic subject matter without special education. Handicapped children present learning difficulties, sensory and motor impairments, which require careful study for successful adaptation of instruction. Teachers of exceptional children integrate professional information from psychology, education, and medicine for instructional and therapeutic services. Consequently, special education as applied to each type of handicapped child has developed some distinctive techniques and materials which distinguish it from regular classroom instruction.

All handicapped children should have appropriate educational opportunities. As the school shares the responsibility with other social institutions for educating all children, it may make a unique contribution in discovering handicaps and providing the needed services for supporting the type of instruction which will enable pupils to fulfill their maximum potential. The majority of pupils with mild or uncomplicated handicaps can be served best within normal classes for instruction. Those pupils whose handicaps are of such nature and degree as to interfere with intellectual development and learning under regular class methods will require differentialized curriculum for some part of, and, frequently, for all of their education.

The Ad Hoc Committee for Differentialized Curriculum for Handicapped Pupils applied the following rationale to the selection of the items for placement in the area: (1) the items were determined by consensus of the committee to be appropriate to the area in terms of selected techniques, materials, and services essential to meeting the needs of pupils having varied handicaps; (2) the items could be defined in brief form using only salient descriptive elements; and (3) the various items classified under Differentialized Curriculum for Handicapped Pupils were identifiable by titles which the ad hoc committee considered to be currently in use and accepted in practice.

Many items of information in chapters 3 and 4 are supportive to pupils, instructional staff, and subject matter in the instructional program. For examples, see the items classified in the X 07 00. Series—Evaluation and Curriculum Improvement on pages 71-78; the items classified in the X 32 00. Series—School Services Supporting Instruction on pages 90-96; and the items classified in the X 09 00. Series—Pupils served by Program of Studies on pages 80-83, e.g., mentally retarded, blind, hard of hearing, speech impaired, crippled. Graphic illustrations of these relationships are shown in table 7 on page 11 and in figure 2 on page 13.

- 19.01 04 00 00 Speech Stimulation—Learning activities which involve the conditioning of speech and language learning by others in the environment. Maximum stimulation provides a direct aid to the speech development process.
- 19.01 05 00 00 Speech Development—The speech and language learning process which usually proceeds from unrelated sounds through several stages until the spoken words have a mutual meaning to the speaker and to the people in the learning environment. Some developmental teaching is done in this same manner.

Cocurricular activities (experiences) are comprised of the group of school-sponsored activities, under the guidance or supervision of qualified adults, designed to provide opportunities for pupils to participate in such experiences on an individual basis, in small groups, or in large groups—at school events, public events, or a combination of these—for purposes such as motivation, enjoyment, and improvement of skills. In practice, participation usually is not required and credit usually is not given. When participation is required or credit is given the activity generally is considered to be a course.

Under this heading are the items of information which identify the various cocurricular activities. Each item of information is treated in one of the following ways: by cross-reference to the subject-matter area in which it has its origin; or, by description; or, by identification with an asterisk (*) referring to descriptive literature from the office of the organization sponsoring the activity. The classified items are only illustrative of the wide range of activities; and, the asterisk (*) is not necessarily identified with all of the listed activities to which it may appropriately apply. The cocurricular activities have been classified into five major categories: academic, athletic, music, school and/or public service, and social.

SAFETY AND DRIVER EDUCATION
21.00 00 00 00

The subject matter and related activities in safety and driver education are organized for carrying on learning experiences concerned with developing in the learner the ability to respond appropriately and efficiently in the operation of a motor vehicle, and as a pedestrian in traffic. More specifically, instruction emphasizes attainment of the following objectives:

- (1) appropriate knowledge and efficiency for living in the total traffic environment;
- (2) fundamental driving skills and correct skill habits;
- (3) desirable behavior pattern in traffic;
- (4) an understanding of driver and pedestrian limitations, obligations, and responsibilities legally and socially; and
- (5) knowledge about the motor vehicle and understanding of how society may achieve maximum efficiency in operating its motor vehicle transportation system.

Subject matter and activities in safety education are primarily concerned with enhancing personal characteristics and values involved in preventing accidents and saving lives. Instruction emphasizes, in addition to other factors, the following: (1) the development of appropriate attitudes towards safety, (2) knowledge concerning a wide range of safety factors, (3) habits and skills involved in safeguarding oneself and others, and (4) effective citizenship.

The following rationale was applied to the selection of items for placement in the Safety and Driver Education subject-matter area: (1) the content items were determined to be appropriate to the area; (2) subject-matter items could be defined in brief form using only salient descriptive elements; and (3) the various items were identifiable by titles which were considered as being most commonly used.

Opportunities are frequently provided both during and outside regular classtime for pupils to develop interests, skills, and knowledge in selected aspects of safety and driver education as an integral part of the instructional program. As an example, the Student Patrol provides additional opportunities to pursue personal interests, apply various acquired skills in traffic safety, increase knowledge in selected aspects of safety education, and develop leadership qualities through safety patrol activities. Such organized activities, under appropriate supervision, are referred to as cocurricular activities. A variety of activities is identified under 20.00 00 00 00 Cocurricular Activities in chapter 5 beginning on page 146; and they are described more fully in this chapter beginning on page 242. As an illustration, the Student Patrol is identified for reporting purposes under Cocurricular Activities as Item 20.04 13 00 00.

Many items of information in chapters 3 and 4 are supportive to pupils, instructional staff, and subject matter in the instructional program. For examples see the items classified in the X 07 00. Series—Evaluation and Curriculum Improvement on pages 71–78, and the items classified in the X 32 00. Series—School Services Supporting Instruction on pages 90–96. Graphic illustrations of these relationships are shown in table 7 on page 11 and figure 2 on page 13.

Included under this heading are the items of information which identify various aspects of subject matter and learning activities in driver and safety education.

JUNIOR ROTC 22.00 00 00 00

Junior ROTC is comprised of a body of subject matter, or combinations of courses and practical experience, organized into programs of instruction to provide opportunities for pupils to prepare for and achieve career objectives in selected branches of the military service. In the instructional process various aspects of subject matter frequently are drawn from other subject-matter areas.

Instruction is concerned with developing (1) good citizenship, patriotism, self-reliance, leadership, and responsiveness to constituted authority; (2) knowledge of basic military skills and appreciation of the role of the military services in military defense; and (3) informed citizens, strength of character, and understanding of the responsibility of citizens in a democratic society.

The following rationale was applied to the selection of the items for placement in the Junior ROTC area: (1) the various items selected and classified were determined as including the aspects of Junior ROTC most commonly taught; (2) the items could be defined in brief form using only salient descriptive elements; and (3) the various items classified were identified by titles that are considered to be in current use in Junior ROTC.

Many items of information in chapters 3 and 4 are supportive to pupils, instructional staff, and subject matter in the instructional program. For examples, see the items classified in the X 07 00. Series—Evaluation and Curriculum Improvement on pages 71–78, and the items classified in the X 32 00. Series—School Services Supporting Instruction on pages 90–96. Graphic illustrations of these relationships are shown in table 7 on page 11 and in figure 2 on page 13.

Glossary

The glossary contains definitions of terms used but not defined in the context of this handbook and such additional terms as seem necessary to common understanding underlying records and reports about curriculum and instruction in elementary, secondary, junior college and adult education. Terms defined elsewhere in this handbook may be located through the use of the index or through the classifications of chapters 3 and 5.

Appendix—Acknowledgments

Hundreds of individuals were actively involved in developing the content of this handbook. Almost 200 persons served at national and regional conferences as representatives of the 13 organizations cooperating in all aspects of the handbook project. More than 170 persons served as members of ad hoc committees concerned with various subject-matter areas; 53 staff members of the Office of Education served as consultants to these committees. Many other individuals who reviewed handbook materials made their contributions in the form of suggestions channeled through these organizational representatives and committee members. Still others contributed to the handbook in responding to specific questions.

While it obviously would be impossible to list here the name of every individual who made an important contribution to the handbook, special acknowledgment should be made to some, including William C. Strasser, Jr., Research Assistant, U.S. Office of Education, for collecting basic background materials comprising the forms, guides, and manuals of the 50 States and over 200 local school systems; Allan R. Lichtenberger, Chief of the Educational Data Standards Branch, Office of Education, in which the project was conducted; Dr. Norman Key and staff members of the National Commission on Safety Education (NEA) for assistance with the Safety and Driver Education subject area; Col. J. L. Kennedy, Col. W. V. Strait, and other staff members of the Office of the Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense, Reserve Affairs, for assistance with the Junior ROTC subject area; Gerald M. Van Pool and Colburn E. Hooton of the National Association of Secondary School Principals for assistance with Cocurricular Activities; and the executive officers of the organizations acknowledged on pages vii–viii.

The list which follows is limited to persons participating in the national and regional conferences or on the subject-matter area ad hoc committees. Participants in national and regional conferences are listed under the organizations they represented, with conferences identified by designations placed after their names according to the following legend:

- (1) Policy Meeting
- (2) National Planning Conference
- (3) Technical Conference
- (4) National Review Conference
- (5) Regional Conferences:
 - (5a) Atlanta, Ga.

The listings of ad hoc committees for subject-matter areas include both committee members and Office of Education staff members serving as consultants.

In most instances, individuals are listed according to their titles and locations at the time they participated in the project.

Educators, public officials, and members of the general public have been expressing increased interest in the appraisal and evaluation of education throughout the United States. To be most meaningful, such appraisal and evaluation require that items of information reported from the various local school systems, States, and regions be comparable. The universal use of this handbook—and of the other handbooks in the State Educational Records and Reports Series—will give major assistance to making such comparability a reality.

This handbook identifies and defines or describes those items of information about curriculum and instruction which should be available on a comparable basis throughout the United States. It provides some guidelines for developing information systems based upon these items. The publication of this or any other handbook, however, does not by itself ensure comparability or standardization of information about curriculum and instruction. Only when most or all of the local and State school systems—and the U.S. Office of Education—use the handbook as a basis for records and reports about instructional programs will information that is truly comparable and combinable be available. Then, there will be significant improvement in the quality and usefulness of information about curriculum and instruction. The use of such information, contributing to enhanced knowledge and more effective decisionmaking, should help make better education possible for pupils throughout the Nation.
